27 Die, 150 Hurt As Tornado Hits Five Dixie States

Raging Kentucky River Sends 100 Families Fleeing Homes.

Town Splintered, Boat Overturned

Gloster, Miss., Wrecked, Mayor Leads Search for Bodies.

By the Associated Press.

McComb, Miss., April 7.—Twenty-seven persons today weer reported dead and more than 150 injured in the wake of tornadoes which swept over Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Alabama and Florida yesterday afternoon and last night.

The tornado took its heaviest toll in the scetion of Mississippi with 8 reported dead at Gloster, 6 at Gillsburg and 3 on a plantation near Woodville, Miss.

Rescue crews searched for the bodies of ten persons believed drowned when winds overturned their houseboat at a logging camp 6 miles south of Lake Providence, La.

Three others died in scattered sections of Louisiana and Texas.

Representative's Uncle Missing.

Among the reported dead were Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Whittington, of Gloster. Whittington is an uncle of of Representative Will Whittington, of Mississippi, and a brother of State Senator Luther Whittington.

W. D. Hogue, 70, prominent Natchez, Miss., timberman and his brother, John Hogue, were reported drowned in the houseboat accident near Lake Providence.

In McLean County, Ky., more than 100 families along the Green River fled from their homes today as the river rose 8 feet above flood stage. At Rumsey, Ky., four of the sixty families who evacuated riverside homes moved into the schoolhouse. One family was living in the courthouse.

The Mississippi tornado, splintering the town of Gloster, with a population of 1,500, left twelve known dead. They were:

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Corbin. Corbin was a sewing machine salesman.

Mrs. T. W. Whittington, 60, wife of a farmer.

Mrs. Chester Allen, 20, wife of a lumberman.

Joe "Preacher" Brown, Negro, of Jackson, who came to Gloster to conduct religious services.

John Barnes, Negro, and five unidentified Negro children.

Six others, killed in the blast at Gillsburg, 20 miles south of here, were Mrs. Vardaman Caston, 20.

Marie Caston, 10.
Mrs. Ida Harrell, 63.
Mrs. Birdie Lee Patrick, 31.
Her daughter, Cathleen Patrick, 5.
Marie Catherine Patrick, 15.

Five unidentified Negro children were killed on the Dolorosa Plantation.

Move Into Box Cars.

Mayor Lewis Kahn, of Gloster, estimated the property damage there as $250,000. He said 87 homes, 20 business houses, three churches, a cotton gin and a cotton warehouse were blown to splinters.

He reported about half of the town's population of 1,079 were rendered homeless. Mrs. Marguerite Bishop, of Hattiesburg, Miss., Red Cross field director, was directing relief work.

Railroad box cars and the town hall were used to house the home-

4 Die as Racer Ploughs Crowd

22 Others Hurt When Auto Leaps Track at Contest in Chateau-Thierry.

By the Associated Press.

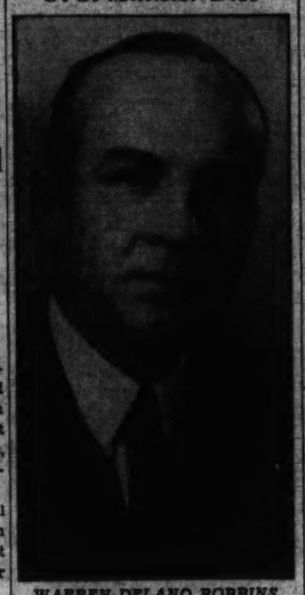
Chateau-Thierry, France, April 7. A racing car caromed off a highway at high speed today into a crowd of people, killing a woman and three children.

Twenty-two others were injured, three of them so seriously that they are expected to die. The machine shot into the crowd like a shell, severing the legs of three of the injured and fracturing those of seven others.

The machine was driven by a racer named Cattaneo in the annual dash up Chateau-Thierry hill. A sudden application of brakes when the car was 100 yards from the finish line caused it to leap from the road, hit a tree and bounce back across the highway straight into the dense crowd.

As the machine whipped around its rear end knocked down spectators right and left. A girl, 2, and a boy, 14, were killed outright. The third child, a boy of 10, and the woman succumbed to injuries later. Cattanee himself was not hurt.

U. S. Minister Dies



WARREN DELANO ROBBINS.

Robbins Dead; N. Y. Rites Set For U.S. Envoy

Cousin of President, Career Diplomat, Succumbs to Pneumonia at 49.

Warren Delano Robbins, United States Minister to Canada, State Department career man and first cousin of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, died yesterday in New York. He had been stricken with pneumonia a week ago. He was 49 years old.

Funeral services for the veteran of the diplomatic service will be held at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning at the Church of the Incarnation in New York. Burial, which will be private, will be at Fairhaven, Mass.

Robbins' mother, Mrs. Price Collier, Tuxedo Park, N. Y., was Catherine Delano before her marirage to Charles Albert Robbins, and a sister of Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of President Roosevelt, who was Sara Delano.

Harvard in Family Tradition.

Members of his family were at Robbins' bedside in Doctors' Hospital, where he was taken when stricken last Monday.

Like many other members of his family, Robbins, born in Brooklyn, N. Y., on September 3, 1885, attended Harvard University. He was graduated in the class of 1908, four years after his cousin, the President. After graduation he entered a diplomatic career and a greater part of his 26 years in this service were spent in South American countries and in Europe.

Early assignments were as secretary to the ministers to Portugal and Argentina, in 1909 and 1910. In the following year he was advanced to the post of third secretary of the embassy in Paris. He stayed in this position until he was transferred to the legation at Guatemala, where he was second secretary.

Assigned Here in 1916.

Robbins was called back to Washington in 1916 and assigned to duty in the division of Latin affairs of the State Department for one year. Then he was sent back to South America, this time as first secretary of the embassy in Buenos Aires.

In succeeding years, as he advanced in rank in the State Department, Robbins was shuttled back and forth between Europe and South America. Each time his position was more important than the last. He was considered an expert in trade affairs and was personally popular in social life.

In 1917, when the council of min-

Lyddane Plot Probers Quiz Mystery Man

Police Silent as to New Witness in Alleged Death Conspiracy.

Assert Evidence Given by 'Harry' Bolsters State's Charges.

From the lips of a man who admitted he was "on the lam" with a girl friend for company and toothbrush for baggage, Rockville police yesterday said they had obtained new evidence in the tangled Lyddane murder plot case which has had Montgomery County police on edge for a week.

Harry E. Thomas, arrested in his car late Saturday night on the outskirts of Baltimore, was questioned at length early yesterday and again briefly during the day. Police said they learned much of value, but refused to give details.

Police admitted they had been anxious to catch Thomas and considered his evidence of utmost value in their case against Mrs. Anne Lyddane and her co-defendants in the alleged plot to murder her husband, the wife of another man, and possibly to rob a Rockville bank of some $70,000.

Link to Robbery Plot.

Thomas, police said, admitted having been approached in connection with a plot to stage a bank robbery. They would not say what his further connection with the case might be. He was booked for investigation at Rockville police headquarters and police said he probably would be held as an ultimate witness for the State.

Chief of Police J. William Garrett and Detectives James S. McAuliffee and James Nolte, who have been working virtually without a let-up since the case came to their attention, said yesterday they had developed several new angles. They will spend today checking on admissions Thomas was said to have made.

Thomas admitted knowing some of the persons previously named in the case, but police refused to say whom he had mentioned. He was questioned from 12:30 a. m. yesterday until 3 a. m. and again yesterday afternoon for more than an hour.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh expects to question Thomas at length this morning. He has not seen the prisoner, although the detectives questioned him in Pugh's office.

John H. (Googy) Carnell, charged Saturday with conspiracy to murder Mrs. Josephine Beall, who once sued for divorce naming as corespondent Mrs. Lyddane, also accused of plotting to murder Mrs. Beall, faced Thomas in Mr. Pugh's office. The reason for this detectives refused to state. Carnell first had been held as a State witness in the alleged conspiracy to murder Francis Lyddane, the accused woman's husband.

Is "Harry" of the Case.

Thomas was identified by police as the mysterious Harry whose name has cropped up frequently in the case. When arrested he said, "Yes, I was on the lam." With him at the time was an unidentified girl, whom police did not hold. His only baggage was a toothbrush, police said.

State Senator Stedman Prescott, of counsel for Mrs. Lyddane, refused to comment yesterday on the arrest of Thomas, but did say that he was sure Thomas was the same person previously "contacted" by members of Mrs. Lyddane's legal staff.

At that time, Prescott said, Thomas admitted he knew both Carnell and John Boland, another alleged conspirator, but denied knowing Mrs. Lyddane. He said, according to Prescott, that he never had been in Rockville and knew nothing of any "plot."

Thomas, detectives said, admitted having been approached by a man who said he was interested in the case, and who added that he came from Rockville. Police said Thomas denied talking with him to any extent.

Snow Maroons 400 Virginians In Peaks, Perils West's Crops

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Luray, Va., April 7.—More than 400 men are hemmed in by snowdrifts in the Blue Ridge of this county. They are unable to negotiate their trucks to get to low-lying territories.

One of the trucks, a short distance from the deepest snowdrifts along the top of the mountain, was able to reach Luray today at 11 o'clock, after CCC men cleared a trail for it over the Skyland drive at camp No. 10, 13 miles east of Luray.

The snow on an average today is 8 inches deep, and in some places is 4 and 5 feet in depth. Heavy gales have been sweeping the crest of the mountain, piling the snow of last night into drifts that cross the Skyline drive.

Most of the CCC men have provisions enough to last them until rain or sunshine clears away the drifts. At Skyland and Big Meadows camps the snow is as deep as at camp No. 10.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, April 7.—A belated snowstorm pushed through a section of the Midwest today on the heels of reviving rains, carrying an attendant threat of frost damage to spring crops.

Six inches of moist, clinging snow had fallen at noon around Macon, Mo., in the northeastern corner of the State. All State highway snowplows in the section were called out to keep the roads open.

Lighter snow fell in other sections of Missouri, and in Iowa, Illinois and Kansas. Springfield, Ill., had 2 inches of snow that later

Mrs. Jack LeBlanc, left, the comely blonde wife of the alleged "gentleman bandit," shunned the photographer as she left police headquarters after visiting husband with a friend last night.

Shock to Young Bride Worries 'Gentleman' Seized as Bandit

Desrochers, Who as Jack Le Blanc Led Life of Luxury and Leisure Here Until Penthouse Raid, Is Concerned Over Pretty Wife, Not Life Term.

"Certainly, I'm not guilty."

But if a Canadian court can pin on him four holdups, in which $200,000 was robbed from Montreal banks, Alfred Jean Desrochers is ready to take the rap—life.

Viewed through the bars of a cell in No. 8 Police Station, life had suddenly turned dark for Desrochers, who as Jack LeBlanc, less than 24 hours before, had found it a thing pretty much of his own making.

So, lighting one of those cork-tipped cigarettes, which he remarked he had stored away "for this occasion," he said:

"I feel rotten."

Life's outlook wasn't all that made this erstwhile gay gentleman of leisure feel "rotten" yesterday. He was thinking of the pretty young woman whom he had married last December. He hadn't told her about his past, except that his French accent was due to a New Orleans residence.

"She is fine and comes from a fine family. She is absolutely innocent, and didn't know anything about my record. I had decided I wanted to do the right thing by her.

"I don't mind all this now for myself. But I feel rotten when I think of her and what the shock means to her."

Was Going "Straight."

Police have given the wife's name as Veraline Dayton, whose family had moved to Baltimore last summer from New Orleans. She knew Desrochers as Jack LeBlanc.

Desrochers, jailed after his arrest in a Connecticut avenue penthouse Saturday night, looked none the less well-groomed for fate's intervention in a leisured life. But there was no trace of sophistication in his eyes when he declared, "I wish I had stuck to the upholstering business."

The prisoner, in speech as refined as his manner, admitted he has had his fling, and while in Washington the last two months had associated with "people who were fine and who were of better social standing than I."

"You see," he explained, "I came here to go into business—legitimate

150,000 Crowd Capital to See Trees in Bloom

Influx of Visitors Sets Record as Blossoms Start Fading.

The States came to the Japanese cherry trees yesterday. An estimated 150,000 persons moved into the city from every section of the Nation, setting an all-time record for cherry blossom pilgrimages.

From dawn until dusk they filed beneath the far-famed trees that fringe the Tidal Basin. They walked. They rode in an endless line of cars. They jammed themselves into long motor buses.

They came with overcoats buttoned high around their necks, for clouds hung low in the sky and a cold northeast wind whipped the thermometer down to the low 40's.

Park police counted 27,340 autos from 9 a. m. until 5:45 p. m., with an average of five persons per car. They estimated the pedestrian travel during the same period at 5,000. The visitation began almost with daylight.

Their number exceeded the capacity of the city's hotels. The overflow filled small town inns and tourist homes within a 50-mile radius. They packed the highways

Roosevelt, Home Tomorrow, Faces an Array of Problems

First Task Is Way to Spend Five Billions to Put All Unemployed to Work Within Year; Strike Threats, NRA Are Worries.

By Felix Bruner.

President Roosevelt is expected back at his desk tomorrow, facing some of the most serious problems of his Administration.

Returning from his Florida fishing trip, the President's first job will be to start machinery to spend $4,880,000,000 appropriated for relief. Exact nature of this machinery still is a closely guarded secret.

There is no secret, however, in the fact that officials likely to administer the biggest peace-time spending job in history of the world are concerned over their ability actually to circulate the money with sufficient speed and effectiveness to carry out the President's promise to put 3,500,000 persons to work this year.

The President, according to the Associated Press, will land at Jacksonville at noon today and proceed directly to Washington. He was aboard the destroyer Farragut last night steaming for the Florida coast.

Immediately on his arrival at Jacksonville he will be given the works bill which he is expected to study on his way to Washington. It was indicated he probably would not sign it until he arrived at the White House. Executive orders and announcements of plans have been written and are ready to be released with signing of the bill.

In his message to Congress, the President said the Government must get out of the business of relief and provide work. Congress has earmarked the huge fund in eight classifications. The President, however, is given great leeway in transferring funds.

While it has been repeatedly stated that the Administration has no intention to return to many of the much-criticized CWA-type of projects, Harry L. Hopkins, who probably will have more than any other person except the President to do with passing out the money, has indicated he contemplates many "white collar" relief projects that hardly come under the heading of productive work. His recent outburst against critics of "white collar" projects in New York was taken as an indication of how he would spend some of the money.

Cabinet Today to Study an Agreement Along 'New Lines.'

Eden Ill, Simon To Submit Report

London Attitude Seen as Insistence on Western Accord.

By the United Press.

London, April 7.—The cabinet was reported tonight to be swinging away from sponsorship of the projected eastern European peace pact in favor of a collective security agreement along "new lines."

The outlines of this latest move to check the threat of war possibly will emerge from tomorrow's cabinet meeting, to consider the report of Capt. Anthony Eden, lord privy seal, on his visits to Berlin, Moscow, Warsaw and Prague in the last fortnight.

The government already is convinced the eastern European security pact, with military clauses calling for mutual armed aid against an aggressor, was killed by refusal of Germany and Poland to adhere to any such scheme including the Soviets.

Eden already has reported fully to Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, and may not appear at the cabinet session. A bulletin was issued by his physician tonight saying: "Capt. Eden is suffering from heart strain resulting from his recent air journey. Complete rest is essential for four to six weeks."

A foreign office spokesman said Eden's condition was causing no immediate anxiety, but his engagements for the next few weeks are being canceled. He was to have accompanied Sir John to Stresa, northern Italy, this week for the conference with France and Italy on German rearmament.

The new attitude of the cabinet on security aroused considerable speculation, but it remained apparent Britain still will refuse to participate in any mutual assistance agreement outside of western Europe.

Nevertheless, she has already consented to consult with other interested powers if Austria's integrity is menaced, and the question of whether Britain will consult if the peace in eastern Europe is threatened remains open.

Britain is expected to keep "hands off" if France and Russia proceed with a security pact, possibly with the adherence of Czechoslovakia, offering armed assistance against an aggressor, and make no move to oppose it, despite German hopes to the contrary.

Paraguay Crushes Two Bolivian Units

7 Towns Seized in Smash Into Foes' Province.

By the Associated Press.

Asuncion, Paraguay, April 7.—Paraguay launched a determined drive today to consolidate its foothold in the eastern portion of the Bolivian department of Santa Cruz.

In a sharp engagement beside the River Parapiti, an official communique said, Paraguayans advanced into Santa Cruz proper and "almost completely destroyed" a Bolivian infantry regiment and a cavalry force. The Paraguayans claimed they took numerous prisoners.

A message from the front said seven Bolivian towns in Santa Cruz had fallen. One of these was Amboro, which will be used as a base for a drive on the city of Santa Cruz, capital of the department of that name, 70 miles distant.

U.S. to Remain Strictly Aloof From Stresa

Hull's Statement on Trade Expresses a Hope, Not a Policy.

By Elliott Thurston.

Secretary of State Hull's statement, printed yesterday, that the way to peace is through economic stability, expresses a hope rather than a policy. This Administration has no plan for calling or joining another international conference. Contrary reports and intimations from high officials that currency, tariff or debt problems should be promptly dealt with internationally reflect personal, rather than official Administration opinions.

This Government will continue to remain scrupulously aloof while the fate of Europe is secretly debated by the British, French and Italians at the important meeting at Stresa, picturesque Italian town, on Thursday, and openly discussed at the League session on the following Monday.

The opinion, unoffically expressed here, is that these two sessions will probably decide whether the French, Italians and Russians will draw together in military guarantees against Germany if she should overstep her boundaries, or whether, as is considered unlikely, British preferences for a general security agreement, with Germany included, prevail.

Recapture of Corridor.

The Nazi vote in Danzig is taken as a forerunner of a plebiscite that will mean Germany's recapture of the Polish corridor, probably peaceably, which may do away with that bone of contention. However, the issue of peace or war lies in the eastern frontiers, as the situation is viewed here, and few informed authorities see hope for much more than an armed truce now of indefinite duration.

If this Government had any contribution to make to the peace of Europe it would be in the economic, not the political realm, since whatever ambitions formerly flourished among some State Department officials looking to American inclusion in a collective peace system through the league, died with the World Court vote. Hence Secretary Hull's latest utterance is confined only to restating the opinion that prosperity would assure peace and that the former requires, by implication, another conference to "give immediate attention to the matter of adopting a sound and

1934 Gold Imports Exceed High of Any Previous Year

Importation of gold into the United States in 1934 exceeded that of any previous year, even on the old dollar value basis, the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce reported yesterday. Gold imports totaled $1,187,000,000.

The report also showed a 27-percent increase in merchandise exports t o$2,133,000,000, nad a 14-percent increase in merchandise imports to $1,655,000,000. Increases of 18 and 48 per cent respectively in receipts and payments on account of international freight and shipping transactions were reported.

Foreign travelers in the United States spent 32 per cent more money than in the previous year, while American tourists in Europe spent only 10 per cent more.

Other items in the report on the balance of international payments included:

International service transactions, including niterest and dividend items, which left the United States a creditor on balance of $375,000,000 on trade and service account, an increase of $175,000,000 over 1933.

A small decline in the estimate of immigrant remittances, placed at $103,000,000, but an increase of 7 per cent in the number of remittances.

A decline of about 14 per cent in interest and dividend receipts on American investments abroad. This was ascribed largely to an estimated drop of 19 per cent in interest receipts on foreign dollar securities previously offered in American markets.

An increase of nearly 20 per cent in earnings on direct investments of Americans abroad.

A tentative estimate that interest and dividend payments to for-

Crookedness at Polls and Hitlerite Abuses Are Charged.

Opposition Groups Injured in Rioting

60% Majority Means Early Return of the Port to Reich.

By the United Press.

Danzig (Monday), April 8.—Official provisional tabulation of the final vote in the free city parliamentary election Sunday gave the Nazis 60.8 per cent of the total of 230,000 votes. Nazis got 139,500 votes.

Unless the final count changes unexpectedly, the Nazis get only 44 seats in the Parliament, or four below the 48 they sought to gain a two-thirds majority and absolute control. They won a decisive victory, but it was admittedly less sweeping than initial returns indicated.

Other unofficial figures gave the following votes: Socialists, 37,530; Centrists, 13,059; Communists, 6,880; the so-called Weiselist, 3,760; the Pietschlists, 750; and the Poles, 8,100 votes. These still are only approximate.

Nervous tension during the day grew more marked at midnight. The streets were crowded with people awaiting some official word on the outcome of the election.

Formal Protest Due.

Almost the entire population appeared on the streets and several minor incidents occurred during the confusion. Numerous attacks on Poles were reported, including two men named Szagon and Kucharski, by bands of unknown rowdies. Both are employed in the Polish commissariat in Danzig, and have diplomatic privileges.

The Poles, together with Socialists, Communists, Centrists and other opposition groups intend to lodge a formal protest against alleged Nazi abuses and crookedness at the polls, leaders averred tonight. They were debating whether to carry the case to Geneva.

At the suburb of Simonsdorf, five houses of Polish residents were entered and wrecked. Polish officials had no verification of a rumor 83 Poles had been attacked during the balloting.

Delay in official announcement of the results, expected hours earlier, caused uneasiness. Some thought it was connected with the Nazis' failure to obtain the two-thirds majority vote which they sought, as one way of showing their strength to the world.

Early Return to Reich.

Early return of the port to the Reich was predicted as result of the vote. Nazi leaders were jubilant at the success of their whirlwind campaign of the past week, led by Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Prussian premier, and Rudolph Hess, Adolf Hitler's deputy as head of the Nazi Party.

The Germans expected an early plebiscite which would be as predominantly in favor of reunion of Danzig with Germany as was the Saar territory ballot in January. The free city population is more than 90 per cent German.

Significance of the Nazi victory today lay in its relation to Adolf Hitler's program of regaining territories wrested from Germany at the end of the World War. The outcome of a Danzig plebiscite would be a foregone conclusion, the voting today proved.

The balloting was orderly, despite bitterness between the Poles, Catholic Centrists, Socialists and other opposition groups and the dominant Nazis, although a few incidents were reported, including stoning of the Portuguese and Latvian consulates. Officials blamed anti-Nazi agitators.

Double Voting Charged.

The Nazi methods in rounding up the voters drew sharp criticism from the Polish representative in the Free City, Dr. Casimir Papee. He charged widespread "double-voting" and "other irregularities" designed to benefit the Nazi candidates.

The Senate spokesman replied that complete secrecy and freedom

Boosts Shown In '34 Salaries Of Executives

Increases Disclosed in Data of Large Corporations to U. S. Commission.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

How the pay of many big coporation executives rose last year was shown yesterday by their reports to the Federal Trade and Securities Commissions.

Francis B. Davis, chairman of the United States Rubber Co., for example, got $125,000 last year, compared with $107,550 in 1932.

J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Co., received $74,440 last year and $30,780 two years before.

The figures available were too few to give a definite indication of the trend throughout the thousands of American corporations, officials said, adding that in some cases changes in official capacity—promotions, demotions or resignations—probably accounted for changes.

Most salaries and other compensation reported to the commission were maintained in 1934 at the 1932-33 rate, although in a few cases there were declines.

James H. Rand, jr., president of Remington-Rand, Inc., received a boost in compensation from $76,128 in 1932 to $94,120 in 1934, but George Horace Lorimer, editor of the Saturday Evening Post, got $100,000 in 1934 against $118,750 in 1932.

The earnings of William E. Levis, Alton, Ill., president of Owens-Illinois Glass Co., increased from $59,166 in 1932 to $100,000 in 1934.

The figures cover officials who so far this year have reported 1934 salaries of more than $50,000 to the Securities Commission.

The comparisons showed that few salaries have attained their 1929 proportions.

In the following table the figures for 1929 to 1933, inclusive, are from the Trade Commission report, and the 1934 figures are from corporation reports to the Securities Commission.

President's Mother Chairman for Fete

Celebration May 12 to Stre Aid for Hospitals.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, was announced yesterday as the honorary chairman of the Golden Rule Mothers' Day committee in charge of the Nation-wide celebration of Mothers' Day, May 12.

Officials stated observances are being planned to focus attention upon the Nation's hospital needs by celebrating Hospital Day and the birthday of Florence Nightingale on the same date.

Committee statistics showed 4,661 privately supported hospitals, 1,897 orphanages and 1,268 homes for the aged received in contributions last year $70,000,000 less than the minimum amount required for normal operating expenses. The institutions cared for more than 5,000,000 persons.

Privately supported hospitals, the committee said, can not share in Federal relief funds, and yet are called upon for a major part of the service rendered the sick.

The committee expects to launch a campaign for funds by asking individual givers to increase their support of private welfare agencies as memorials to their mothers.

128 Families Approved For Subsistence Homes

Approval of 128 additional families for seven subsistence homesteads in four States was announced yesterday by the Interior Department. This brings the total of families approved for homesteads to 893. The new families will move to projects in Tennessee, Texas, Mississippi and Indiana.

County Kiwanians to Frolic.

The Kiwanis Club of Prince Georges County, Md., will hold its first anniversary celebration Thursday night at the Beaver Dam Country Club. Dinner will start at 7 p. m., followed by entertainment and dancing. Ticket reservations may be obtained from Harry Eisenhauer, telephone Hyattsville 940.

Between You and Me

President Has Money, Now to Find Projects; the Hodge Podge War Profits Bill.

By Raymond Clapper

WHILE the signing of the works relief bill probably will be accompanied by a burst of announcements and some ballyhoo, the real news is more likely to develope gradually as specific projects are approved.

When Congress hands over almost $5,000,000,000 to be spent virtually at the discretion of the President, it is a dramatic event. Even the microscopic details will be elaborated until the public's ears are deafened with a jangle of plans, hopes, promises and speculation.

However, the job of distributing the money—a sum equal almost to $5 for every minute which has elapsed during the Christian era—is bound to be a tedious process, involving countless conferences, visits of innumerable delegations, writing of letters and reports that will cover miles of white paper. Overnight results can not be expected. Even under the heaviest steam the effects will appear gradually. Months from now it will be possible to judge something of what is being done. Officials have to be allowed time to show what they can do.

* * * *

Meantime probably almost every community is going through what one county has been up against. Under CWA, after exhausting the supply of shovels and wheelbarrows, and putting men and women at every conceivable project that could be devised, some $500,000 was spent. Relief officials of this county recently were asked to draw up projects contemplating expenditure of $1,000,000. Having exhausted their ingenuity on CWA they were hard put to produce the requested projects but they finally succeeded and appeared proudly before their State relief officials. The State headquarters glanced at the projects and then said: "Now suppose you go back and work up projects for expenditure of $4,000,000." The county delegation all but fainted.

* * * *

Finding of sufficient work is the problem. But it is a problem largely because there are so many inhibitions, so many toes that must not be stepped on. They could, in this particular county, clean out some bad rural slums, but local influences are strongly opposed to it. Even the inhabitants of the slums are indifferent. So it goes. Millions will be spent keeping people busy on useless projects, while prejudice, selfish interests, inertia and ignorance make it almost impossible to turn this vast sum of money into the work that most needs to be done.

* * * *

One of the best indicators of business activity is in bank clearings. For March these were 12 per cent above those of March a year ago. Some people think that you can improve conditions by printing more money. There is plenty of money. Faster turnover is what is needed. When your business increases you deposit more checks in the bank and draw more checks. Then bank clearings go up. In March they were higher than at any time since January, 1932.

Some Department of Agriculture experts figure that the meat prices have not reflected the effect of the drought and won't until midsummer. Present high prices, according to those taking this view, are due rather to AAA curtailment. They figure that the effect of conditions in the cattle industry requires a year to show up in retail prices. On that basis the drought effect still is to be felt. Then, if we have another this summer, that will show in prices in 1936. AAA with God's help may make us a Nation of vegetarians yet.

The McSwain bill which started out as a bill to limit war profits is finishing up with almost everything in it except the kitchen stove. It contained a provision for drafting manpower and after a fight an amendment was inserted to forbid use of drafted troops on foreign territory except to prevent invasion of the United States. An attempt to exempt newspapers from licensing was first defeated, then adopted. A proposal to put munitions makers under license in war time was ruled out on a point of order. The President was empowered to commandeer the Nation's financial resources in war time, the original bill having already given him such power over material resources, industrial organizations and public services. An amendment permits conscription of the managers of transportation, communication, commerce and industry in war time. When added up the bill would make the President dictator in time of war, but it goes all around Robin Hood's barn to do it. The measure has become a hodge-podge satisfactory to no one.

But at the last moment the House unexpectedly inserted provisions for taxing war profits. For some curious reason those in charge of the bill had fought off such proposals. They were going to handle the situation by fixing prices and thus regulating profits. The plan was that the House Ways and Means Committee might do something about the tax angle.

Meantime in the Senate there is pending the Nye bill for controlling war profits through taxation. But the Senate can not under the Constitution originate tax legislation. It must come from the House. Many members of the House privately preferred the Nye bill to the House or McSwain bill. They broke loose late Saturday afternoon and under pressure Representative McSwain put the tax provisions into his bill as an amendment.

The significance of that is that now the Senate can go ahead and consider its own tax proposals and when the two bills are brought together in conference a measure can be practically rewritten out of them which will deal with the problem in more orderly fashion.

The units are to be sold at $96 to and including May 31, 1935, and thereafter at $100 a unit. W. E. Brown, of Tulsa, is president.

Land Bank Bonds On Market Today

$162,000,000 Issue Will Bear 3.25% Rate.

A new issue of $162,000,000 of 10 to 20 year consolidated Federal Land Bank bonds, bearing 3¼ per cent interest and dated May 1, 1935, will be offered to investors today, W. I. Myers, Farm Credit Administration governor, announced yesterday.

These bonds are being offered for the purpose of refunding 5 per cent individual Federal Land Bank bonds, the entire outstanding issues of which have been called for payment May 1.

The new bonds are being offered by the 12 land banks at 100¾ per cent and interest, to yield about 3.16 per cent to the first callable date, May 1, 1945, and 3.25 per cent thereafter to redemption or maturity.

The offering is the second of consolidated Federal Land Bank bonds. The first was on June 8, 1934, when $131,400,000 par value of 4 per cent bonds dated July 1, 1934, were offered.

Thomas Challenges Coughlin, Huey Long

New York, April 7 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, today challenged Father Ciughlin and Huey Long to debate the issue of an American Fascism, for which, he asserted "you are preparing us both by your programs and your methods."

His challenge to the two said, in part:

"This open letter ti you jointly is born of no agreement with an adversary whom we share in common, Gen. Hugh Johnson. Politically he is deader than his own Blue Eagle, though he still retains his voice and his vocabulary.

"I write from a very different position. I am a Soicalist, who fears abive everything—unless it be new World War—an American Fascism. And for that, whether you know it or not, I believe that you are preparing us both by your programs and your methods."

Liberty League Asks New Deal Be Weeded Out

Group Proposes Voiding 'False Moves,' Adopting Permanent Policy.

The American Liberty League yesterday proposed that the Administration discard economic and sociological experiments that have failed to bring about anticipated results.

"Uncertainty as to the course to be pursued by the Federal Government is one of the gravest obstacles to economic recovery," the league statement said.

Declaring there is need for adoption of measures designed to solve national problems along lines in conformity with the ideals of the American people and in harmony with constitutional principles and institutions, the league made the following suggestions:

Appraisal Asked.

"1. That there be a prompt and frank appraisal of the various ambitious economic and sociological experiments undertaken during the past two years, that those which have failed to bring about the results anticipated be discarded and that those which give some promise of producing beneficial results be continued with modifications where necessary in order to bring them within the scope of authority properly exercised by the Federal Government in accordance with the Constitution.

"2. That definite and unequivocal assurance be given of an intention to bring the Federal budget into balance within a reasonable time in order to allay fears of ruinous inflation and a wrecking of the Nation's monetary and credit structure.

"3. That business, both small and large (meaning the combined efforts of the American people to earn a livelihood), which has supplied the funds to operate the Government—and the future earnings of which form the only basis of Government credit—be relieved of unnecessary harrassment, bureaucratic control and demagogic arraignment.

Restrictions Cited.

"4. That essential relief activities, both those partaking of the character of an outright dole and those described as work relief, be carried on with the least possible interference with normal economic processes; that heed be given to the restrictions on the work relief program as outlined in President Roosevelt's message at the opening of the present Congress, but largely ignored in subsequent legislative proposals.

"5. That there be an immediate cessation of attempts to subvert basic constitutional principles through the delegation, or attempted delegation, of legislative and judicial powers to executive officials and bureaus."

Ethiopia Defies Italians, Warns Of Resistance 'to the Last Man'

Emperor Is Ready to Pit His Primitive Army Against Invaders.

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, April 7.—Emperor Haile Selassie declared today he is ready to pit the silver-covered leather shields, curved scimitars and ancient black powder rifles of Ethiopia's fighting forces against the heavy artillery and modern bombing plans of Italy in defense, if necessary, of the last black empire.

Although he emphatically stated that Ethiopia does not want war, the dark-bearded "King of Kings, elect of God, and conquering Lion of Judah" made plain in an interview that his nation will resist any invasion to the last man.

The audience was held in the Emperor's favorite chamber, the tower of his new palace which stands like a lighthouse amid the green foliage surrounding his royal quarters, set among African grass huts, calabashes and native markets.

"Ethiopia does not want war. Yellem! "Yellem!" the Emperor, his dark eyes flashing, almost shouted. The Ethpiopian "yellem" means a double strength negative.

"As a member of the League of Nations and signer of the Kellogg Pact, we are bound to exhaust every means of peaceful settlement before resorting to war."

"But," he added solemnly, almost as though taking a vow, "in case of any foreign invasion while efforts to secure peaceful settlements are in progress, Ethiopia will resist that invasion to the utmost."

While the Emperor spoke there could be seen through a window of the palace a stream of native warriors garbed in the somewhat sunfaded Belgian khaki uniforms they wear, barefooted, filing through a crooked street swarming with gossiping natives in flowing white robes.

They were reported from other sources to be going to the frontier. Despite their none-too-smart sartorial appearance and their lack of most of the modern contrivance of warfare, the Emperor was confident that his fighters would give a good account of themselves. Many of his leaders who believed likewise recalled the Italo-Ethiopian conflict of 1896 in which 8,000 Italian invaders were slaughtered.

Will Count Haugwitz Be Barbara's Next?

By the United Press.

London, April 7.—The Countess Adelaide Haugwitz, sister of Count Haugwitz, whose name has been associated with that of Barbara Hutton since the five-and-ten heiress announced her intention to divorce Prince Alexis Mdivani, tonight hinted the count might be Barbara's next husband, according to the Sunday Express.

A correspondent of the London newspaper sent from Vienna a dispatch in which the countess is quoted as saying:

"I cannot deny that my brother might marry Barbara Hutton."

Reno, Nev., April 6.—If anyone in Reno, or anywhere else, cares to speak disparagingly about Barbara Hutton, he would do well to keep out of the way of Clinton Gardner, her chauffeur, according to the citizens here.

A Reno man is now wearing a black eye because he spoke in disrespectful terms of the young woman who is seeking a divorce from Prince Serge Mdivani, of the marrying Georgians.

The affair took place in a night club.

Production of Whisky Is Increasing in U. S.

Production of whisky in the United States is rapidly increasing, figures made public yesterday by the Federal Alcohol Control Administration indicated. Last year 108,051,325 gallons of whisky were produced and deposited in bonded warehouses. Production in December was more than double that of January, 1934.

At the close of the year, distillers had on hand 99,116,437 gallons of spirits, as compared with 34,105,987 in January 31, 1934.

Foreign Legion Soon to Invade Jungle Country of Savage Mois

Attacks on Outposts Lead to Strong Measures by the French.

By the Associated Press.

Saigon, French Indochina, April 7.—The Foreign Legion, keeper of the peace in France's far-flung colonies, is preparing today for a new campaign against the savage Moi tribes, so primitive that they still fight with poison lances and kill their own wounded rather than leave them in the hands of white men.

Outbreaks against French outposts have led to strong military measures by colonial authorities. Ten soldiers were killed and many wounded in recent raids by the aborigines.

Although Indochina became a French colony in 1860, the black-skinned Mois, descendants of tribes which long ago migrated from the Malay Peninsula, have never acknowledged French sovereignty.

The Moi country, where few white men set foot, stretches from the north frontier of Cochin, China, to the limits of upper Sinai Province and Darlac Province in Annam. The jungles are inhabited by elephants, wild bulls and tigers.

In the past the French colonial government has followed a policy of "peaceful penetration" seeking to push its outposts farther and farther into the Moi country by treaties and agreements with the tribes, often accompanied by gifts.

Sorcerers, practicing an ancient ritual of "black magic," are the real rulers of the tribes. In the family life women and not the warriors are the heads and children take their mother's name.

The colonial government has strengthened the outposts and provided radio communication with headquarters in Saigon and with other posts for use in summoning help when heavy attacks occur.

Healer Found Shot Dead.

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Joel Perkins, 58, Negro spiritualist healer, was found shot to death today beside the Drainage Canal, with shotgun charges through the back of his head and his face. Coughlin Avers He Abhors Any Kind of Dictator

Radio Priest Calls Union Sixth Great Competitor of Capitalism.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, April 7.—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin classed the program of his National Union for Social Justice, in his weekly broadcast today, as the "sixth great competitor" of modern capitalism, which he charged had been "perverted into exploitation."

In the same breath he declared the union would not countenance the "philosophic socialism" of Marx, communism, fascism, nazism or "any other of the old isms" which other critics of capitalism have propounded as its substitutes.

Father Coughlin said his union "abhors" dictatorship in any form and is fearful because "a spineless Congress, subservient to the President," contains too much hint of such a trend in this country.

"The real Fascists in America," he declared, "happen to be the plutocrats." He again assailed the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, which he said consisted of "52 representatives of big business," as a further indication of "the same Fascist tendency" which resulted in Italy in the election of representatives by economic classes rather than by geographic districts.

Conceding that capitalism has been the "best system for the production of wealth," Father Coughlin charged that capitalism had failed in the distribution of wealth once it had solved the problem of production. He added that his union recognized that wealth "must be redistributed in justice to all."

Father Coughlin made his broadcast the occasion for a new denunciation of his foes for "arguing with personalities and damnable lies."

He denied specifically as "three distinct lies" charges contained in a report of the Methodist Federation for Social Service that he had underpaid workers engaged in the construction of his Shrine of the Little Flower, employed nonunion printers and underpaid clerical help engaged in the work of his National Union.

Alleged Hireling to Face Trial in Daiches Case

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Arthur Emblen, alleged "jobber" in murder, is scheduled to answer in criminal court tomorrow the charge that he conspired to slay Eli Daiches, for whose assassination a year ago Irving Weitzman, chain bakery owner, is serving a life term in prison.

The State announced readiness to prove Emblen, hired by Weitzman to kill the wealthy advertising man, had sublet the assignment to Jack London, since slain.

During Weitzman's trial six weeks ago Emblen surprised the State by refusing to testify.

Chinese Propose Deal With U. S. Rubber Firm

Nanking, China, April 7 (AP). Negotiations are reported under way between the Chinese government and an American rubber company for the establishment of a tire manufacturing plant here.

It is understood the factory, if built, would be operated by the Goodyear Rubber Co., under the supervision of the Chinese government. It would be jointly financed.

China imports about $500,000 worth of tires annually from the United States and the demand is growing as the number of motor cars increases.

Coolidge's 2d Cousin Released From Jail

Rutland, Vt., April 7 (AP).—Miss Bertha Moore, 40, second cousin of the late Calvin Coolidge, who had been in jail for five months because of her failure to pay a $5,000 heart balm judgment, was released yesterday, it became known today.

The verdict had been awarded Mrs. Carmen Gilman, of Ludlow, Vt., a former factory worker, who charged that Miss Moore, former town clerk of Ludlow, had alienated the affections of her husband, Albert. Miss Moore was released after she had assigned to Mrs. Gilman her share in a $35,000 trust fund left by her uncle, the late W. W. Stickney, a former Governor of Vermont.

in all directions, compelling suburban police to work in 24-hour shifts trying to keep traffic under control.

Along the Rockville and Frederick roads innkeepers kept their places dark to keep the overflow trade away. Women and children were stranded in police stations until police were able to find quarters for them in private homes.

Bethesda police, while wishing to avoid arresting regulation-breaking tourists, found themselves unable to cope with the traffic situation until 14 speeders had been taken into custody.

The railroads did a land-office business, breaking cherry blossom week-ends for all time, bettering any previous record for excursions with the possible exception of inaugurations. The Pennsylvania ran eight extra sections on its blossom excursion from New York and put on three additional special trains. The C. & O. and B. & O. ran the excursion total to 22.

Bus Business Booming.

Interstate bus lines and sightseeing tour companies did a business that officials estimated at anywhere from 40 to 60 per cent over last year—the year of the Cherry Blossom Festival which set a near record in crowds.

The airlines also profited handsomely, most lines selling out all regular planes and putting on several extras. Restaurants fed thousands from early morning until late at night. Souvenir vendors worked overtime and drug stores did a month's business in camera film.

The cherry blossoms, however, had passed their peak. Rain and chill winds had stripped tree tops. Pink-white petals drifted more than an inch deep along the sidewalks and curbings. Children picked them up and hurled them in handfuls.

The size of the throng caught the Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade off guard. Curtis Hodges, committee director, and assisting office clerks worked until nearly dawn yesterday trying to find lodging for hundreds of motorists and excursionists.

Room applicants crowded into the committee's offices. Seven phones were kept busy all Saturday afternoon and until 3 a. m., Hodges said. He said the rush was repeated most of yesterday.

Hodges said his office had never been so rushed. He said the entire Nation was represented.

isters of France visited the United States, he served as an aid. Later in that year he was attached in a similar capacity to the Belgian commission which visited this country.

Social Aid to Hoover.

Robbins was adviser to the American delegation at the Washington arms conference here in Washington in 1921 and 1922 and served on the foreign personnel board. In the interim, from 1918 and until the arms conference called him back, he was first secretary at the embassy at Santiago. He left that post to become chief of the Near Eastern affairs division during the reconstruction years following the World War.

Later he was counsellor at the Berlin embassy, from 1922 to 1924, and for the next three years held a similar post in Rome.

In 1928 he returned to South America, this time as minister plenipotentiary to the Republic of San Salvador. He stayed there in this capacity until 1930 when one of his brief and infrequent home assignments called him to Washington. He became White House ceremonial officer and chief of the Department of State division of protocol, replacing the dapper James Clement Dunn. President and Mrs. Hoover made the choice. He later startled society and burst into brief newspaper notoriety by appearing at a function in what social arbiters described as the wrong trousers.

Sent to Canada in 1933.

Robbins retained this position, living the while at his Georgetown home, 1534 Twenty-eighth street, until his cousin, who had become President, appointed him Minister to Canada in 1933.

Soon after presenting his credentials to the Canadian government, Robbins went to London to assist American delegates to the world economic conference. While there he was received by King George. He also counted Premier Mussolini of Italy and the late Field Marshal Paul von Hindenburg of Germany among his friends. In Washington he was well known through his White House service.

Robbins is survived by his mother; the widow, the former Irene de Bruyn, of Buenos Aires, whom he married in 1910, and three children, Warren, Edward and Helen. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Cyril Martineau, of London, and two half-sisters, Mrs. George B. St. George and Mrs. Charles Fellows Gordon, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.

Secretary of State Hull yesterday termed the death of Mr. Robbins "a loss to be keenly felt on both sides of the long border that divides the two countries."

"I have worked closely with Mr. Robbins during recent years," Secretary Hull said last night, "and I know the enthusiasm, the interest, and the ability with which he discharged his duties. His many years of experience in the foreign service and his practical charm enabled him to make very real and very practical contributions to the friendly relations between Canada and the United States."

The State Department announced that Pierre Boal, counselor of the legation in Ottawa, would become charge d'affaires pending appointment of Mr. Robbin's successor.

Ottawa Is Shocked At Robbins' Passing

By the Associated Press.

Ottawa, Ontario, April 7.—News of the death of Warren Delano Robbins, United States Minister to Canada and dean of the diplomatic corps here, was received with expressions of deep regret in official circles.

Sir George Perley, acting prime minister, said "the death of the Hon. Mr. Robbins has come as a great shock to all his friends in Ottawa. Along with his family, Mr. Robbins took an active and welcome part in the life of Ottawa.

"He was in the prime of life and could well have expected many more years of service to his country. It is difficult to realize that we will not longer have the pleasure of discussing with him the many questions that arise from day to day between his country and ours. I personally regret very deeply his sudden passing, a regret which the prime minister and the other members of the government all share."

Diplomatic representatives of a number of other countries here expressed regret at the passing of their friend.

It was understood Canada would be represented at the funeral services in New York Tuesday by William D. Herridge, Canadian minister to Washington. The American Legation here also will send representatives.

Horror as Gale Wrecked Town Is Told by Survivor of Tornado

'We Worked All Night With Lanterns Searching for Dead, Haven't Had Any Sleep Yet,' Relates Mississippi Merchant at Scene.

The following account of the Mississippi tornado was given the United Press by Tyler Conerly, service station attendant at Gloster over an emergency telephone line that was installed into the stricken town at 4 p. m. Sunday.

By Tyler Coverly.

Gloster, Miss., April 7.—The storm hit so suddenly that we didn't realize what had happened until it was all over.

There were about 20 people on the streets, and how they escaped is a mystery to me. Only three places in town were open, a dry goods store, a cafe and a barber shop. They had the usual late Saturday night trade.

I was in the dry goods store with a couple of people. It was pouring rain, but nobody had given any thought to a tornado, and, of course, it couldn't be seen in the darkness.

It's hard to explain how it sounded—something like a terrific roar, swishing past. The front end of the dry goods store fell out and we ran into the street. It was littered with boards and bricks.

The rain stopped for about 40 minutes and then another rainstorm set up, and hail with it. Everybody came to town and we started out to look for the injured. Most of us worked all night with lanterns and flashlights, and we haven't had any sleep yet.

The telephone lines were down, so we loaded the injured in automobiles and began moving them to Hillsburg and McComb.

We only have one telephone line into town now and it's the one I am using.

less. An emergency soup kitchen was erected and hundreds were fed.

The storm struck at Gloster about 10:20 p. m., wrecked buildings in a wide path and tore down power and communication lines. Thundershowers and hail followed the wind.

Mayor Kahn organized searching parties which went about in the darkness with lamps digging in the ruins to pull dead and injured from the debris.

Forty-five persons were taken to the Steele Hospital at Centreville for treatment.

Dozens of others were brought to the hospital here for treatment.

"Gloster was almost wiped out," said State Senator Dave C. Bramlett, of Woodville, who toured the stricken area. He said many dwellings were "flattened," and the Yazoo & Mississippi Valley Railroad depot, the hotel and a water tower at Gloster demolished.

Lightning Kills Two.

Four-year-old Merlin Patrick was found wandering near his home at Gillsburg as his grandmother, mother and sister lay dead in the ruins of his home.

Northeast Louisiana felt the brunt of destructive spring tornadoes early last night when at least four persons were killed. Texas and Alabama also felt the storm and Florida had scattered thunderstorms.

One cone dipped from the sky at Lake Providence, La., and another struck near Sicily Island, 75 miles south of Lake Providence. Several houses were demolished as wind, rain and hail added to the discomforts for two hours. Several were reported injured.

Lightning accounted for two deaths yesterday, striking down Marion Friday, 38-year-old farmer near Chestnut, La., and I. J. Stevens, 32, a farmer near Crestview, Fla.

Oil Derricks Blown Down.

Property and crop damage was reported running into thousands of dollars. High winds prevailed in Mississippi and Louisiana throughout the night. Hail was so heavy in some places that it resembled a snow blanket.

Highway traffic near Lake Providence was disrupted by debris hurled across the road by the storm. Telephone and telegraph lines were crippled.

Two Negroes were injured by a tornado which swept through Valley Park, near Vicksburg, Miss., last night. The storm blew away their house. At least four other houses were demolished.

Oil derricks and homes were blown down near Henderson, Tex., and C. R. Wheat, 26, was instantly killed. A Negro drowned when a sudden windstorm overturned his boat near Vivian, La.

Strong winds raked Opelousas, La., and Pritchard, Ala., during the last 24 hours. A lumber mill at Pritchard was severely damaged. Shreveport, La., likewise counted property loss after heavy winds swept that area.

Philippines Struck, 4 Reported Killed

By the Associated Press.

Manila, P. I., April 7.—Four persons were reported killed, many injured and several hundred families left homeless today by an unseasonable typhoon which struck the island of Samar in the eastern Philippines.

The storm, which was described as of moderate intensity, lashed the region yesterday, but was reported breaking up along the east coast of Luzon.

A dispatch from Catbalogan, capital of Samar, said one of those killed was a woman prisoner crushed when the roof of the provincial jail collapsed.

The damage at Catbalogan was estimated by authorities at several hundred thousand dollars. Cocoanut trees were uprooted in the province of Tayabas. Legaspi, the capital of Albay Province, was damaged with many homes destroyed, the reports said.

Houseboat Upset, 10 Persons Drowned

By the Associated Press.

Lake Providence, La., April 7.—Reports reached here today of the drowning of ten persons in a houseboat overturned by storm winds at a logging camp 6 miles south of Lake Providence.

Two Negroes who escaped from the boat when it sank last night arrived here today and told of the accident.

The Audrey L. and a Government boat searched the vicinity for the bodies.

Those reported missing and believed drowned are: W. D. Hogue, 70, prominent Natchez, Miss., timberman; John Hogue, his brother; Eppie Sparks, 25, Lake Providence; Tom Oklahoma, Lake Providence; A. Abernathy, 34, Lake Providence; four Negro men and one woman, all unidentified.

peated recently his declaration that the money must go into projects from which there will be a return.

Immediately the bill is signed there is expected to be a grand scramble for the money. State and local officials all over the country have been laying plans for obtaining aid for pet projects. Many of these have been examined by Public Works and relief officials and it is probable some allotments will be announced immediately. Secretary Ickes can at once allot $100,000,000 for projects that have been approved. This is in addition to housing projects which probably would absorb several times that amount, but on which actual work could not be started for several months.

Dust storms and increasingly serious drought conditions in the West have made action there imperative. It is expected that, directed by Undersecretary Tugwell of the Department of Agriculture, some of this work will be started immediately. Men can be put to work on short notice on this type of project.

Labor Trouble Imminent.

Another immediate problem involves what appears to be a strong possibility that the President's truce with organized labor is about to be broken. A strike in the great rubber plants in Akron, Ohio, is described as "imminent." A shutdown there will almost immediately involve the automobile industry, which has been the one bright spot in the slow recovery movement.

A walkout of comparatively few men in Akron can halt operation of the only large industry that really has been going ahead. It is considered probable that, if the situation continues to be serious, the President will step into it, as he did in the threatened automobile strike last year.

All this is in addition to pressing problems in Congress where the President's legislative program is showing little progress. Next to the question of putting men directly to work, the problem of relieving business uncertainty would seem to be the most pressing.

Business is More Restive.

Regardless of assurances from Donald R. Richberg and others, there are increasing indications that business is becoming more and more jittery because of uncertainty of the future of NRA. It is no more nervous, however, than several thousand NRA employes who would like to know whether they are going to keep their jobs.

The President, it is expected, will put immediate pressure on Congress to get NRA legislation under way. Introduction of the Administration bill in the Senate more than a week ago was hardly more than a stop-gap expedient. The bill was introduced for the purpose of showing doubters that the committee really meant to have a bill. As a matter of fact, the committee now is little less confused concerning NRA than it was when it began its hearings several weeks ago.

"Deterring positive action on NRA legislation is the fact that the whole question of the constitutionality of the plan is pending before the United States Supreme Court, where a decision may or may not be reached before June 16, when the act expires. Recovery officials did their best to prevent bringing the case to an issue, but were forced by pressure from business men and others to bring about a showdown.

NRA Officials Nervous.

If the Supreme Court should rule adversely, it would be necessary for the Administration and Congress to make an entirely new start in their business recovery program.

As a matter of fact, recovery administration officials themselves are becoming nervous over the situation. The NRA expires in June. All the codes expire with it. If the law is to be changed, greatly, and there is every indication it will be, there will be a great job of revamping and rewriting codes to be done on short notice. Every day enactment of the law is delayed means a more serious jam of business when it finally is passed. For weeks after the new measure is passed, if it does become a law, NRA is expected to see reenacted something of the grand scramble that marked early days of the Blue Eagle.

Only less urgent is action on other Administration legislation, including social security measures, holding company proposals, the bank bill and a transportation program.

Plans Set to Raise CCC to 600,000 Men

By the Associated Press.

Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, reported to President Roosevelt that he has completed plans for increasing enrollment to 600,000 under the new $4,880,000,000 work program.

Asserting that the CCC had carried forward conservation work "from 10 to 20 years" in its two years' existence, Fechner recommended that it be made permanent.

Officials said that to increase the corps' authorized strength from the present 370,000 would involve about 900 additional camps and 10,000 administrative officials.

The works bill continues the CCC for two years with a $600,000,000 allocation and authorizes payment of salaries since March 31, when statutory authorization expired.

Fechner said the total cost of the CCC up to February 27 was $651,087,085 while value of work done up to December 31 was $335,000,000.

Revolters Discharged By Greek Government

Athens, April 7 (AP).—More than two score public officials were dismissed today as the government inaugurated a policy of weeding out "undesirable elements" following the recent revolt.

After a meeting of the council of ministers, the official Gazette announced the retirement of five councillors of state, six councillors of the supreme court, seven councillors of the court of appeals, 12 presidents and members of the tribunal of first instance and a number of officers connected with the departments of justice and police.

LaGuardia Takes a Dig At Crabby Magistrates

New York, April 7 (AP). — Mayor LaGuardia today turned his ire upon city magistrates who "bawl out" police officers in court. If the practice doesn't stop, the Mayor said, he'll sit as magistrate himself.

"It doesn't take great courage for a man with a robe and a gavel to bawl out an officer," he told 5,400 policemen at the seventeenth annual Holy Name Society breakfast. "When you have a case, if it is real, you bring it into court."

South Carolina Convict Killed In Prison Rush

6 Escape, Guard Wounded When 9 Inmates Attack Arsenal.

By the Associated Press.

Camden, S. C., April 7.—Three Negro convicts were shot, one fatally, and a guard was wounded seriously today when nine Negro prisoners rushed the arsenal at the State prison camp in a desperate break for freedom and six escaped.

Gov. Olin D. Johnston authorized Adjt. Gen. James C. Dozier to order out a sufficient number of National Guardsmen to aid in rounding up those who escaped.

The nine made the break as the prisoners were being marched downstairs from their cells for the noonday meal.

As they reached the bottom of the stairway they charged a guard and knocked him down. Then they entered the guards' quarters, snatched guns and shot their way out of the narrow hallway.

A guard, Gilbert Mahaffey, standing in the yard, wounded three of the prisoners as they fled.

A shot from one of the convicts struck Mahaffey in the abdomen. At a hospital attaches said his condition was critical.

The wounded prisoners were taken to the State penitentiary at Columbia where one died. The other two were being treated at the prison hospital there.

Strike Verdict Held Imminent In Rubber Vote

Union Officials at Akron, Green, Here, Predict Tire Walkout.

By the Associated Press.

Akron, Ohio, April 7.—While union workers of the B. F. Goodrich Co. and the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. balloted today on the question of a strike, their union leaders predicted heavy majorities in favor of a walkout.

To the meeting of the Goodrich local 3,000 workers went, and to the Firestone session, about 1,200, it was estimated.

Union workers of Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., whose vote last Sunday was described as "nearly 100 per cent in favor of a strike," held a rally attended by about 1,600.

The Goodrich and Firestone workers, in closed session, were addressed by Coleman C. Claherty, president of the United Rubber Workers Council, and other union representatives.

Claherty and heads of the union locals said the vote would be overwhelmingly in favor of a strike. The voting will continue until Wednesday night.

George Roberts, and A. F. of L. organizer, said strike plans would include the policy of ignoring a ban on mass or chain picketing.

A ban was decided upon recently by city officials, headed by Mayor L. S. Myers, and county authorities headed by Sheriff James Flower.

The union's demand is for a written agreement embodying a 30-hour week, a basis for future negotiations and a stipulation the companies will give no financial support to company unions.

The production and maintenance departments of Goodyear employ 14,000, Goodrich 11,000 and Firestone 9,000.

The companies have declined to hold impartial elections for representation in collective bargaining, saying the unions should await the outcome of pending court tests of the National Labor Relations Board's orders for elections.

Rubber Plant Strike 'Imminent,' Says Green

Government officials yesterday were watching developments in the proposed strike of rubber workers at Akron, Ohio, a strike that, if prolonged, would seriously impair the thriving automobile industry.

As rubber workers in the Ohio city were voting on the question of a walkout to force union recognition, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared a strike is "imminent."

Green declared that the workers in Akron will strike for enforcement of a decision of the National Labor Relations Board ordering a Government-supervised election in the rubber plants.

"They will neither surrender nor compromise," he said.

The strike could be avoided, Green said, if the management of the plants would permit the employes to hold an election and to decide for themselves whether they wish to join a company or outside union.

The rubber strike is the most serious labor controversy at present, although there still is talk of strikes in the textile, automobile and steel industries.

Meanwhile, labor leaders are working for the enactment of the Wagner bill which would outlaw company unions and would set up a "supreme court for labor."

7-Ply Program Urged to Insure Schools' Safety

Submit Montgomery Plan to County Principals for Study.

Recommendations for the welfare and safety of school children of Montgomery County, Md., are embodied in a seven-point program proposed by the safety committee of the county schools, and are being submitted to principals of the county schools.

The program was announced yesterday by Mrs. Julian Waters, of the board of education; Miss Dorothy Nichols, principal of the Woodside School, and L. Fletcher Schott, principal of the Montgomery County High School and chairman of the safety committee.

In announcing the program the sponsors expressed the opinion that "one of the main objectives of the present day school is to educate citizens in community living" and further that "health and safety earnings are more important than some of the academic rituals which are quickly forgotten."

The seven-point program follows:

1. Each school is asked to organize a schoolboy patrol under the direction of the American Automobile Association, which will furnish equipment. The county police will furnish instructions.
2. Each school is asked to form a safety club or an organization which will teach principles of safety to the children.
3. A safety magazine is to be subscribed to by each school, probably through the local Parent-Teacher Association.
4. Prohibit the use of toy weapons by the pupils and playground recreation is to be carefully supervised by teachers.
5. School children will be given a constructive viewpoint regarding the celebration of July 4.
6. The dangerous practice of skating on highways is to be particularly emphasized.
7. The local Parent-Teacher Association or school should give a party in honor of the patrol and all other pupil safety workers.

Town Council Will Meet.

A meeting of the Hyattsville mayor and council will be held today at 8 p. m. in the Municipal Building.

business. And I was cultivating the associations that would help me get located."

He hesitated a moment, then his eyes brightened and he smiled, "Really, I'm not such a bad sort of person."

But events of Saturday night had erased all hopes of the future he had planned and, faced with a trip to Canada to answer the charges against him, Desrochers contemplated "a long stretch" in the penitentiary.

"If I am guilty of the accusations they make against me, then I deserve to go to prison for life," he said solemnly, "and I am ready to go. I'll go and by good behavior try to shorten my sentence."

"By good behavior" Desrochers has already shortened two sentences given him. Once, in Canada, he was found guilty of house burglary. He was sentenced to four years in prison. He was paroled later.

Moving to the United States, to the West Coast, Desrochers was convicted of highway robbery and sentenced to two years. He was paroled on good behavior before serving the entire term. He has been on parole since 1930.

But these two convictions will work against him when his hearing comes up in Montreal within the next six weeks, Desrochers believes. That is why he is sure he will get life "if they can pin these bank holdups on me."

Studied for Trade.

Born 38 years ago in Canada of French parents, Desrochers went to schools that gave him the equivalent of a high school education, he said. His father was a machinst, but he wanted to be an upholsterer. He studied the trade, and followed it for a while.

"But that is so long ago, I can hardly remember when it was," he commented.

Regardless of Desrochers' fate after he leaves Washington this week Montreal police are coming for him, the purses of six persons who were instrumental in his arrest will be enriched.

The reward for his capture was $5,000. A similar amount was offered for the arrest of a pal, Walker G. Nevin, who was taken into custody at Baltimore, shortly after Desrochers' arrest Saturday night. The $10,000 will be divided among District Detective Sergts. Van D. Hughes, Eugene Lambert and Robert Bryant, who assisted in Desrochers' arrest; Warren Shanks, of the Baltimore Police Department, who helped in Nevin's arrest; Raymond E. Kennedy, former newspaperman of Washington; a private detective in Baltimore, who brought the tip of Desrochers' whereabouts in Washington, and an unnamed woman who gave the first tip.

N. Y. Charity Head To Describe Work

An address on "Social Work and Social Action" will be given at the annual meeting of Catholic Charities of Washington at the Willard Hotel Wednesday evening, 8 o'clock, by the Rev. Bryan J. McEntegart, director of the children's division of the Catholic Charities of New York.

Father McEntegart is nationally known for his social work, considered an outstanding authority on charity agencies and their administration. He was a member of the White House conference on children.

Dr. John O'Grady, director of the Catholic Charities of Washington, will outline future plans for the organization while the Rev. Lawrence J. Shehan, assistant director, will give a report of work in the last fiscal year. George L. Cleary, president of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, will give the society report and Mrs. George O'Connor will describe works of the Ladies of Charity of Washington, of which she is president.

turned to rain. A strong north wind was expected to bring snow to Chicago.

Freezing weather was predicted here tonight after mixed snow and rain had deposited a total precipitation of .9 inch. Clouds blanketed the territory as far west as central Kansas, south to Oklahoma City, and east to Columbus, Ohio. Alternating rain and snow were reported through most of the section.

Effect of the late thrust of winter on growing crops was problematical today.

Prairie farmers had rejoiced in the general rain which greened vegetation, mellowed fields and cut the extent of the drought-dust belt.

Muddy roads—for once—were almost welcome.

Cattle which had blown nostrils in distaste at silt-filmed pastures grazed eagerly on grass washed clean by rain.

Wheat changed color and alfalfa fields improved.

Precipitation, however, missed much of western Kansas, eastern Colorado and the Panhandle country, where a 4-year dry spell has been climaxed by severe dust storms this spring. Choking dust clouds still boiled today in the western part of that area.

Hubert L. Collins, Department of Agriculture statistician at Denver, said favorable planting conditions on the western slope of the Colorado Rockies will tend to offset conditions in the drought-stricken east plains counties.

"The outlook for irrigation," he said, "is the best in four years on the western slope."

Glass Prepares For Skirmish On State Banks

Steagall Revives Old Feud Over Their Membership in Federal Reserve.

The old Congressional feud over the idea of forcing all State banks into the Federal Reserve System is being renewed and showed signs yesterday of causing more fireworks than ever.

On the one side are Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, and his followers who believe the State banks should join the system; on the other are Chairman Steagall (Democrat), Alabama, of the House Banking Committee and his adherents who contend an independent State banking system is essential.

The issue is wrapped up in the Omnibus Banking bill being studied by Steagall's committee. One section provides that no State bank may be allowed Federal deposit insurance after July 1, 1937, unless it belongs to the Federal Reserve System.

Steagall, it was learned, intends to move to strike the stipulation from the bill. That would leave the door open indefinitely for State banks to obtain deposit insurance. But for the first time since the dispute started, Steagall finds a considerable number of his own committee members siding with Glass.

Consequently, it was said, when Steagall proposes to delete the section, other committeemen will suggest that the effective date be moved up a year from July 1, 1937, to July 1, 1938.

Glass and Steagall for years have fought over the issue. In each of the last few Congresses they have closed the sessions with bitter dispute. And all Glass has been able to achieve so far has been a future requirement of reserve membership for State banks.

In fact in the last Congress Steagall won a point by forcing through in the closing days a bill postponing from 1936 to 1937 the requirement that State banks may not have insurance unless they joint the Federal Reserve system. But the House banking Committee was with him then.

The committee will resume work on the bill today, with another move developing to create a Federal monetary authority with control over the issuance of all money.

A primary aim of the banking bill is to extend Federal control over banks and credit operations generally.

Senator Glass, who is credited with the authorship of the Federal Reserve act, has not said that he would oppose the banking measure, but both friends and enemies expect him to lambast it with customary vigor. Extension of Governmental authority over banks is one of the things to which he is strongly opposed.

eign investors amounted to $125,000,000.

A net inflow estimated at $100,000,000 from international security transactions.

The unprecedented inflow of gold followed devaluation of the dollar.

Amos E. Taylor, assistant chief of the finance division of the bureau, said in his report on gold importations:

"The most important factor in the United States balance of international payments in 1933 was the devaluation of the dollar on January 31 to 59.06 per cent of its former gold value. The event inaugurated a record importation of gold, valued at $1,187,000,000, into the United States which represented in substantial part the inward movement of funds which had been shifted from the United States to foreign centers during the preceding year.

"The movement was augmented by the tendency of foreign bonds to seek safety here as a result of political unsettlement in several of the 'gold bloc' countries of Europe. This combination of influences produced heavy discounts on gold standard currencies during February, a factor which, aided by a gold price in London lower than that established in the United States, at once set in motion one of the largest international gold movements ever recorded.

"The year's inflow of gold, which had not been previously exceeded even on the old dollar-value basis, was influenced in part by the comparatively large merchandise export balance of $478,000,000, the largest since 1930. Gold imports exceeded exports during every month of the year except September, a month of unusually heavy silver imports which resulted largely from the executive order of August 9, providing for the 'nationalization' of silver, and from the provisions of the silver purchase act of June 19.

"Merchandise exports of $2,133,000,000 exceeded those of 1933 by 27 per cent in value, and, even on the basis of physical volume, were 8 per cent larger than those of the preceding year. Merchandise imports, which were about the same in quantity as in 1933, were valued at $1,655,000,000, 14 per cent higher than in the preceding year."

Gas Cut Sought In Montgomery

Citizens Urge Permanent Equalization of Rates With District.

Permanent equalization of gas rates between suburban Montgomery County, Md., and the District of Columbia is one of the important subjects before the Montgomery County Civic Federation, which will hold its monthly meeting tonight at Bethesda Elementary School.

The gas rate problem has been before the federation in some form since 1928. The federation was instrumental in getting the Maryland Public Service Commission to order an 8½ per cent reduction temporarily last year to coincide with a similar reduction in Washington. This discount has recently been extended by the commission until June 30 and the federation is seeking to have the order made permanent.

Another utility matter before the federation is a resolution seeking a reduction in rates for electricity supplied in the northern section of the county by the Potomac Edison Co.

Hagerstown Boasts An Albino Frog

C. C. Moler Bought Tadpole From Fisheries.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 7.—The albino frog of the Museum of Natural History of New York, which is credited with being as rare as human quintuplets, isn't so rare after all, for there's a white frog here.

The frog, much alive, is the propety of C. C. Moler, and it has white skin and pink eyes. It was obtained some weeks ago from a Frederick County fisheries, when it was only a tadpole, and has been going through the transposition period since. It now has four legs but is not a fully developed frog.

Moler saw the white tadpole, which is rare, among some several thousand other tadpoles and bought it.

Bring Your Optical Needs to Us

Only thoroughly trained, registered optometrists can give you the high quality service upon which your eyes—and your general well-being—must depend, if you are one who must wear glasses. Consider the many steps necessary, if your glasses are to give the best service.

First comes the visit to your Oculist or Eye Physician—or our optometrists can prescribe for you after carefully determining your requirements.

Next, the Dispensing Optician must carefully measure the distance between your eyes and the length of the temple line.

Then Frames are selected, in accordance with these measurements.

The Lens Data is next worked out and placed in the surface shop, where about 20 operations are required to grind the average lens properly.

Next, the Cutting and Shaping are done on the edging stones, and the glasses are mounted in the frames.

The sixth step is the Fitting, after which the glasses must go to the oculist or optometrist to be checked.

You will find our Frames and Mountings represent the latest styles—and that prices for them, as well as for our skilled and competent service, are most reasonable. We maintain our own Optical Shop adjoining the Optical Section.

Power Famine U. S. Foresees Held an 'Error'

Utility Executive Denies Scarcity Imminent, Pictures Reserve.

By the Associated Press.

Accusing the Federal Power Commission of using "erroneous assumptions" leading to wrong conclusions that a power shortage is imminent, a private utility spokesman said yesterday excess electricity generating capacity exceeded normal reserve requirements by 20 per cent.

Bernard F. Weadock, vice president of the Edison Electric Institute, New York, said in a statement the commission's theoretical peak demand for power, 23,000,000 kilowatts, was about 7,000,000 kilowatts too high.

Meantime, a quarrel in another power field, regulation of utilities, ran on with an assertion by Chairman Rayburn of the House Interstate Commerce Committee that the pending utility bill did not propose to take regulatory power away from State commissions.

Rayburn was referring to testimony before the committee by B. H. Lester Hooker, chairman of the legislative committee of the National Association of Railroad and Utilitites Commissioners, who charged the bill "emasculated and devastated" State commission powers.

"The bill," Rayburn said, "does not contemplate the fixing of rates in any State on power or gas."

Weadock said commission engineers arbitrarily disregarded a large amount of capacity in older plants in their report, "evidently on the basis these are no longer needed." These plants are well able to produce in emergency, he said, adding:

"There is actually 5,942,000 kilowatts of installed capacity in the United States more than the report shows, and this amount is three times the total net estimated shortage of 1,961,000 kilowatts shown by the Federal Power Commission's report."

Weadock said the commission had taken particular pains to justify Government power projects.

"Thus the way is paved," he said, "for the highly uneconomic Passamaquoddy Bay project by claiming that Maine, alone among the New England States, is shy of adequate power."

Youth Stubs Toe And Breaks Neck

By the Associated Press.

Fitchburg, Mass., April 7.—Lawrence Duval, 23, stubbed his toe and landed in a hospital today.

Duval, found lying unconscious on the sidewalk, was taken to a hospital, where doctors said he had suffered a possible fracture of the vertebrae in his neck. He regained consciousness and his condition was not considered serious.

He said he stubbed his toe, felt a sharp pain in his neck and back and awoke in the hospital.

France Uncovers Marriage Racket

Alien Women Hiring Men for Citizenship Papers.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 7.—Police investigated a "marriage for citizenship bureau" today which specializes in securing French husbands for foreign women threatened with expulsion.

The inquiry was begun with the discovery of the marriage of a young German business woman to a 70-year-old indigent Frenchman who returned to the poorhouse after his bride secured French citizenship papers on the basis of his nationality.

The bureau is believed to be using a list of "clochards," which the French term old "bums" who sleep under Seine bridges or are housed in public institutions, as husbands for the foreign women.

Many foreign working women, it was reported, are making themselves French through marriage and then disappearing after the payment of a small fee.

Five Billion Drop In Loans Revealed

Home Loan Board Desires Long-Term Amortization.

By the Associated Press.

The Home Loan Board disclosed yesterday that American banks and insurance companies were holding approximately $6,000,000,000 less real estate loans than in 1931.

This information was transmitted to managers of the Home Loan banks throughout the country by T. D. Webb, vice chairman of the board, who urged effort to convert the outstanding loans into long-term amortized loans through building and loan associations and cooperative banks.

Webb's data shows that building and loan associations in 1934 held $4,685,000,000 of mortgages in city and suburban homes, as compared with $8,585,000,000 in 1931, mutual savings banks, $4,025,000,000, as compared with $5,987,000,000, and insurance companies, $842,000,000, compared with $2,079,000,000. The total was $9,552,000,000 in 1934, and $14,461,000,000 in 1931.

Object—Not Matrimony

By Lillian Barker

Katrina Harman, on her eighteenth birthday discovers that instead of being wealthy, she has lost her fortune. She also discovers that Tazewell Bronson, whom she loves, also loves her but has no intention of marrying anyone. Ill-advisedly, she allows him to pay for some dresses she has ordered, giving her I. O. U. for them. She determines never to see him again. After discouraging search for a job, she becomes a waitress in the Blue Moon restaurant. One day she is told to take particular care of a certain luncheon party, but bringing in the first tray, she finds that the guest in question is Tazewell. She drops the tray of hors d'oeuvre on his companion's frock.

"WHAT SERVICE! I thought you told me this was a 'rendez-vous' for the elite," the woman in the bespattered frock was grumbling to the elderly foreigner whose monocle seemed to emphasize his "foreign - ness." "Well, if this is the way the elite get served, excuse me from any further visits to The Blue Moon. I wish I'd never even heard of the 'chic restaurant' you've been trying to drag me to ever since we arrived in New York. Such an experience!"

"Oonfortunate, of course, cara mia," conceded the man-with-the-monocle. "I regret, deplore . . ."

"A lot of good that does now! I intend, however, to give the— that fop of a restaurateur, what's his name, Doremus?—a piece of my mind. Yes, sir, I purpose to tell him what I think of him and his table service. Send for him immediately, Guglielmo. Immediately"

Tazewell Intervened.

"Please, please," it was Tazewell intervening and his hand was on the woman's arm, "don't make any trouble for the little waitress, I beg you. I'll . . . I'll buy you a new imported frock, just as expensive as the one you have on, if you'll only keep quiet Accidents are liable to happen to anybody, any time, anywhere. Don't you know they are?"

And to the foreigner, a man old enough, apparently, to be his father though he, too, addressed him by his first name, Guglielmo:

Don't send for the manager. It would be useless to make a fuss. What's done is done. And no one's really to blame. My sister, on second thought, does not want to stage a scene, do you, Muriel, old dear?"

So that young woman was Tazewell's sister, the elderly foreigner her husband, no doubt the Prince Dell'Aquila, and Taz was interceding for her, pleading for her, Katrina Harman, "the little waitress!" How he must pity her!

Humiliation Grew.

Trina stooped down to pick up the broken china. With it she'd make her escape from the restaurant, from the presence of Tazewell and his party. The shock and the agony of meeting him again, especially in circumstances so unnerving and painful! And the injunction of Doremus to serve table 12 with such particular care . . . then to have that awful mishap occur!

These thoughts swirling through her mind, Katrina caught sight of two strong, masculine hands—familiar, possessive hands that had, on occasion, held her own in affectionate clasp—also reaching down on the highly polished parquet floor for shattered dishes. Taz, in his pity, was helping her rescue the broken dishes. Humiliation piled on humiliation.

Wanted to See Her.

"Trina," he whispered after the wreckage was all transferred from floor to tray, with the tray placed on a vacant table beside which guest and waitress were standing. "I must see you away from this restaurant. I must talk to you alone. Of course, you don't know it, but ever since you fled from the Holts I've been trying to locate you. Yep, I 'phoned Elena every day till day before yesterday, when she and her parents left for Canada, to see if she'd heard from you. I was so afraid you—you might be in need."

In need! Her material welfare was all he thought about now; all that concerned him. Probably he didn't even remember all that ardent lovemaking that had set her heart to thrilling.

"Well," retorted Katrina, head high even if her pride was bedraggled, "you had all your fears for nothing, for I'm nicely provided for, thank you. Quite nicely provided for."

Pleaded to Help.

"Trina, child, stop acting, stop pretending with me. If you had even the necessities of life would you be here waiting on tables? Certainly not. No, this just won't do. You can't continue in this menial job. It's too degrading. Now, I'm going to—to assist you financially till you can learn how to earn a dignified living if you insist upon working, and Elena told me she was sure you ran away from her home wholly and solely to establish your independence. So choose your vocation. Anything at all that . . . that isn't servile."

A pause, and "You owe it to me to let me help you." The dark eyes that from the first had captivated her and still held her captive in spite of hurts, wounded pride, even heartbreak, were like Tazewell's words, entreating. "In your situation, why be absurdly conventional? All I'm asking is the privilege of aiding you. Just that, nothing else, I swear it."

Debt Worried Her.

"And I refuse to give you that privilege," Katrina said without hesitation. "The fact that I already owe you $625 has kept me awake nights, but some day I'll pay you back, don't worry."

"Worry, Katrina! Worry! I'd completely forgotten that little matter . . . that trivial favor . . . if such you want to call it. And that's what you must do, too, never, never think of it again.

"When and where can I see you, though? Quick, quick, tell me. The manager's coming! Through the hall door to our right. Now when and where can I see you?" Taz repeated. "The sooner the better. Together we must arrange for your future."

"You will never see me any more, anywhere, Tazewell," pretty red lips resolutely set. "Not if I can help it. And after all that's happened between us you owe it to me not even to try. That is the least you can do . . . to leave me alone . . . now and forever."

Doremus Was Furious.

Taz studied her countenance, especially the resolute mouth. Then, apparently on impulse—unexplained impulse—he took two long strides in the direction of the advancing Doremus. The restaurant manager on whose face he'd discerned a scowl, one that even from afar struck terror in Katrina's heart.

That the boss was all set to bawl her out she knew. But the reprimand she could not, and would not, submit to in front of Tazewell Bronson. No, there were some things a person just couldn't stand, some things beyond human endurance. . . .

Snatching up the ill-fated tray from the table, Katrina escaped into the kitchen, handed the tray to a dishwasher, slipped by Gladys who was occupied with a luncheon order and said to Enrico, the chef:

Chef Was Kindly.

"Please tell Mr. Doremus that he'll have to get another girl to wait on table 12. Something . . . something just occurred in the dining room. . . ."

"I know. I know, signorina." Always kindness itself to Trina, Enrico, a corpulent Italian in chef's white uniform and large white cap shook his hand comprehendingly. "You 'ave drope ze . . . vassoio fiorentino, ze Florentine tray in Eengleesh."

"Si, si," Enrico went on to explain, "Il Signore, ze boss, he vas out-a here in ze keetcheen seeing zat zis veree special loonch vas being prepared joost like-a he vant it ven anuzzer vaitress she rush in wiz ze news of ze accidente . . . and ze boss he rush into ze dining-room to give you 'ell . . . he 'alf Corsican, remember, an' gli uomini della Corsica . . . ze mens of Corsica, I mean, 'ave ze vors' tempers in all ze vorl'. . . . an' to apologize to ze party at your table. He vas tryeeng to show off before ze gran' principe Dell'Aquila an' . . ."

"And I ruined everything by dropping the tray," deplored Trina. "Mr. Doremus will never forgive me."

No Word for Gladys.

"I so soree for you, signorina," sympathized the chef. "I likea-you. You are a ladee but," uncovering a boiling pot, "escuse me. If I let zis gnocchi burn I vill catch 'ell, too. Eet also is for table twelve. And one accidente is enough for today. Non e verro? I mean, is it not true? I spik-a 'igh-closs Eeengleesh ven I not too busy. Now, zo, I veree busy wiz ze gnocchi. Don't you grieve too much about ze smash, 'owever, signorina. You could not 'elp it."

"No, I couldn't help it. But one thing more, Enrico, please Tell the boss . . . I know he'll be back here shortly . . . that my nerves are all shot; that I'm going away from The Blue Moon for a little while . . . I'll be back before long, though . . . after the guests at table twelve have departed. Then he can say whatever he has to say to me. Also, Enrico, don't tell Gladys, my girl friend, about my leaving. She wouldn't quite understand and she might try to stop me."

"Zin I no tell her, I promise."

DOCTOR TOLD HER HOW TO LOSE 17 POUNDS OF FAT

Gossipers Peeved

Mrs. Robert Hickey of Roseville, Calif., writes: "My doctor prescribed Kruschen Salts for me—he said they wouldn't hurt me in the least. I've lost 17½ lbs. in 6 weeks. Kruschen is worth its weight in gold."

Mrs. Hickey paid no attention to gossipers who said there was no safe way to reduce—envious women who don't like to see others youthfully slim. She wisely followed her doctor's advice. Why don't YOU?

Get a jar of Kruschen today (lasts 4 weeks and costs but a trifle) and if you don't lose 12 lbs. and feel years younger and healthier—money back. Merely take half teaspoonful in cup of hot water every morning (tastes fine with juice of half lemon added). Adv.

Counting to Thirteen.

One difference between the good bridge player and the poor one lies in ability and willingness to count. Strange as it may seem, few players take the trouble of counting to 13. And yet, holding 13 cards in their own hand and a contract to fulfill, the most elementary procedure calls for a count of the adverse hands.

1—East hoped to enter the bidding suddenly in the diamond suit and get doubled at a makable contract.

2—North's hand is too weak to shade the requirements. A two club bid, showing preference, would be better.

3—Based on distribution.

The Play

West opened the Queen of Diamonds, which declarer ruffed with the deuce of clubs, South's Ace and King of clubs fully exhausting the trumps. He then led the Jack of hearts, which West took with the Ace, and returned a small diamond, which declarer ruffed. The six of hearts was led from the closed hand, taken by the King in dummy, and East showed out. The Queen of hearts was returned, affording declarer a spade discard, and a low spade followed from Dummy. On this East played the four and declarer won with the King.

South next led the Jack of spades and East won with the Ace, a false card, and returned a diamond, which was ruffed in declarer's hand. The ten of spades followed, West playing the eight-spot, dummy discarding a low heart, and East took the trick with the Queen, defeating the contract.

Had South counted East's hand, however, he would have made his contract. Three rounds of diamonds had been led, to each of which West had followed. With three in the dummy, the maximum number of diamonds held originally by East could only be seven. Declarer knew he had only two clubs and one heart. Therefore he must have started with three spades. When declarer led the third round of spades and West played the eight, the only spade unaccounted for was the Queen, which had to be in East's hand. Dummy therefore should have ruffed with the club Queen and declarer could have spread his hand for the rest of the tricks.

ENERGY! An editor gives his experience. Ray Baker says: "Whenever I feel 'all in,' I can quickly get a lift with a Camel. Camels bring back my 'pep,' and I can tackle the next big story with renewed energy!"

SO MILD! Miss Margaret Nichols, expert woman reporter, says: "I've learned that Camels are a smoother smoke. They have a mild flavor—delicate, pleasing—entirely different from any other cigarette. Camels taste better!"

FLAVOR! "Camels have a great taste—rich and pleasing," says Herman J. Lamkin, linotype operator. "I've smoked them for many years. I can smoke as steadily as I want to, and Camels don't ever affect my nerves."

VALUE! "Camels are made from costlier tobaccos. They're the real 'extra value' cigarette," says E. E. C. Pickwoad, ace news-photographer, who often uses fast airplanes to get "front page pictures" for a great New York newspaper. "I'm loyal to Camels," Pickwoad continues. "They taste so much richer and smoother—never frazzle your nerves. I have smoked Camels for years and I, too, would 'walk a mile for a Camel.'"

HEALTHY NERVES! Pat Robinson, well-known sports writer, says: "I've been smoking Camels ever since they were put on the market. I smoke at least two packs of Camels a day. They never interfere with my nerves."

French Cabinet Acts Tomorrow To Fix Agenda

New System of Collective Guarantee Proposal by Laval.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 7.—France's intention to propose at Stresa a system of pacts guaranteeing that Europe's armies would aid each other in case of an attack on any country was reflected today in speeches and in newspapers.

The exact nature of Foreign Minister Pierre Laval's proposal for mutual assistance accords to reinforce the League of Nations' covenant was not disclosed pending its discussion by the cabinet Tuesday, but it was described in parliamentary quarters as "a system of collective guarantees."

Deputy Adrien Dariac, an important member of the chamber's foreign affairs committee, said "in the face of the Hitler threat it is important that Britain, France, Italy and Russia affirm solemnly their close solidarity and we do not doubt that this solidarity will receive definite consecration at the coming conferences."

The French still speak in generalities about confronting Germany with a "common front of ideas," indicating they will listen willingly to whatever plan Benito Mussolini offers at Stresa.

Some quarters expect Il Duce to propose calling on Germany "for the last time" to return to the league and disarmament negotiations, otherwise the rest of Europe would prepare to defend itself by "a collective military understanding."

France's first problem is breaking down the British "wait and see" policy of conciliation with Germany, Paris circles said. French officials appear confident of Russian agreement on a firm policy toward Germany and Laval will take to Stresa the Soviet attitude, which he discussed with the Russian ambassador yesterday.

Deputy Dariac, addressing a banquet of crippled war veterans, asserted, "in the face of a Germany whose will to war no longer leaves any doubt and whose provocative attitude constitutes a peril for world peace, we must open our eyes."

While organs of the political left attacked the government's decision to keep an outgoing class of conscripts under colors until the recruits are sufficiently trained to man frontier fortifications against a sudden attack, expected hostile demonstrations failed to materialize.

Scene of Latest Nazi Triumph of the vote was present everywhere.

The Nazis maintained a continuous propaganda all day. The city was aflutter with Nazi emblems and Nazi bands played while the people sang Nazi anthems, and shouted for a return to the Fatherland.

The next step in the Nazi campaign presumably will be a vote to alter the free city constitution and ask the League of Nations, which administers the city through a high commissioner, to permit a plebiscite.

The Reich's propaganda minister, Dr. Paul Joseph Goebels, openly referred to the projected plebiscite in an address closing the campaign last night. Hitherto, the subject had been avoided because of possible international complications.

Danzig, lying on the Baltic on the western border of East Prussia, and almost entirely surrounded by the Polish corridor, was taken from Germany after the World War and made a "free city" under the guardianship of the league.

It has a population of 330,000, mostly German, in its 739 square miles of territory.

Poland may be expected to protest against a plebiscite.

The elections in Danzig today were for the 72 seats in the Parliament, of which the Nazis held 38. They hope for at least a two-thirds majority in the new parliament, or 48 seats.

U. S. to Remain Strictly Aloof From Stresa

Hull's Statement on Trade Expresses a Hope, Not a Policy.

comprehensive economic program, both domestic and international, and carrying it forward to the end that normal processes of domestic and international finance and commerce may be restored. * * *

In another Administration this declaration by the Secretary of State probably would signify a definite policy. In this one, it is only another expression of hope already long deferred. For the New Deal is not much better prepared to shape either national or international policy to international agreement than it was at the time of the fruitless London conference.

A Dread Subject.

Secretary Hull, like Ambassador Bingham at London, who has twice publicly urged currency stabilization, is protagonist rather than exponent of a policy. His statement by inference calls for bold international action to reduce tariffs, quotas, abolish exchange restrictions and otherwise unshackle world trade. It implies that "immediate attention" should be given to stabilization, the essential concomitant of tariff agreements. It implies also that the debts should be dealt with finally.

None of these things is the New Deal, as such, prepared to do. Domestic policy of price raising still calls for higher rather than lower tariffs on this side. Stabilization is a dread subject on which Treasury officials seemingly dare not speak even in whispers. The debts are equally tabu politically. In general, the Administration is inextricably tied into its nationalistic program, to the exclusion of all of the policy implied by Secretary Hull, Ambassador Bingham or other opponents of self-containment.

Hence, not only is this Administration staying far away from Stresa or Geneva, politically, but it has no contribution to make economically, evident as it is that this would tremendously advance the cause of world peace.

Takoma Park Hearing Is Set

Advocates of Amendments to Charter Will See Nice Tomorrow.

Proponents of the bill recently adopted by the Maryland General Assembly authorizing drastic amendments in the town charter of Takoma Park will be given a hearing on the measure by Gov. Nice at 10:15 a. m. tomorrow at Annapolis.

At the hearing a delegation headed by officers of the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park will urge the Governor to sign the bill. The bill was introduced by State Senator Stedman Prescott, of Montgomery County, at the behest of the club.

The Maryland Governor was urged not to sign the bill by a group headed by Mayor Frederick L. Lewton and members of the town council last week.

The position of the club was set forth in a statement issued by its president, J. Bond Smith, on behalf of the executive committee, in which petitions filed by the town council with the Governor were branded as "gross misrepresentations of the bill.

Alleged misrepresentations, said Mr. Smith, include charges that the bill would increase the town's tax rate, disfranchise a number of property owners from voting in town elections and require the town to finance unnecessary street improvements.

Minor Hospital Fire Causes Much Hubbub

Fire engines roared to a grinding halt in front of Georgetown Hospital last night. There was plenty of excitement.

There was a fire in the hospital. It turned out to be minor. The blaze was at the bottom of an elevator shaft. An attendant noticed it at 6:30 p. m., and turned in an alarm. A hose he wielded himself however, halted the fire before the engines arrived.

Damage was nominal. There was little smoke. No patients were disturbed. But there was excitement, plenty of it, outside. The nuns and nurses were calm. All they said was, "The firemen were very prompt."

Mother Collapses After Hearing Moron StoleBoy

Chicago, April 7 (AP).—Little Richard Max Perrot's mother collapsed today as police obtained additional evidence that the child disappeared four days ago with a supposed moron dubbed the "Thin Man."

The new evidence came from Miss Margaret Octon, 26, clerk in a candy store. She said she had seen him Thursday evening with a man meeting the description of the "thin man in overalls" with whom the 4-year-old boy was last seen by playmates.

She said the man purchased candy for the boy.

Soviet Anxious Lest 3 Powers Scrap Security

Fears Western Trio Will Leave Eastern Europe Exposed to Attack.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 7.—Fear that a lengthy and fruitless discussion of the general European peace system would sidetrack plans for regional security pacts and leave countries of eastern Europe exposed to attack was voiced today as the time for the Stresa conference drew near.

Leading Soviet writers hinted that a general conference to force a quick defensive action of some kind against German rearmament should follow the Stresa talks and the meeting April 15 of the council of the League of Nations in case nothing definite is decided at those get-togethers.

Moscow's views were summed up in an editorial in the journal De Moscou, the government's French language paper, which is filling an unusually important role in view of the nearness of the visit to Moscow of Pierre Laval, French foreign minister.

"One must be careful," the newspaper said, "in view of a new maneuver being encouraged by Germany, Poland and other open and concealed enemies of the eastern pact.

"The object of this maneuver is to bury regional pacts in a lengthy and fruitless discussion of a general European accord. A consultative nonaggression pact would merely be another Kellogg pact and would constitute no guaranty against war.

"It would be useful only if paralleled by regional pacts. The fate of Europe depends on decisions to be adopted in the near future."

Laval is expected here April 20. Eduard Benes, Czechoslovakian foreign minister, has also signified his intention of coming although no date has been mentioned.

Homes Erected By U. S. Opened To 93 Families

About 50 Dwellings in Red House, W. Va., Project Still Unoccupied.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charleston, W. Va., April 7.—The Government's homesteading project at Red House, Putnam County, 27 miles east of Charleston, built with relief funds at a cost of $800,000, was opened to 93 families last week. There are about 50 more houses yet to be filled.

West Virginia relief funds for April were reduced materially because of funds curtailment at Washington and, instead of the monthly allowance of $2,000,000, only $500,000 was received to maintain the approximtae 70,000 persons on the relief rolls. Added to this sum, however, will be the State's contribution of $250,000.

Within the last few days several more officials of the West Virginia Relief Administration have resigned, foreshadowing what many believe will be a general shake-up. Those who resigned are: Kenneth W. Miller, assistant director of social service and Donald G. Galehouse, Mrs. Mathilde Alch and George Harwood, field agents. It is understood W. N. Beehler, the administrator, has induced Mr. Harwood and Mrs. Alch to reconsider. Their decision probably will be made known at a meeting of the State relief board Monday.

The first State-owned liquor store authorized by the newly created State Liquor Control Commission has been equipped at Charleston, but no liquor has been placed in it.

Equipment for the liquor stores, consisting of metal shelving and counters, was manufactured at the West Virginia Penitentiary in Moundsville. Its delivery to the Charleston store within three weeks after the machinery for its manufacture was ordered, the commission claims, justifies that group's refusal to have the work done by private concerns. Protests against having the convicts make the equipment were made by union leaders to Gov. Kump. The labor organizations also protested vainly against using convicts to install the equipment. The Governor is said to hold that in dispensing labor, the State can not discriminate as between union and nonunion men, especialy since union men constitute less than 25 per cent of the State's employables.

Riverdale Pastor to Talk.

The Rev. W. Keith Custis, pastor of Riverdale Presbyterian Church, will be the visiting preacher Wednesday at 8 p. m. in Pinkney Memorial Protestant Episcopal Church, Hyattsville. It will be one of a series of midweek union services being held in that church during Lent.

Anti-Crime Meeting Planned.

A mass meeting of citizens of Bladensburg and vicinity will be held today at 8 p. m. in the Bladensburg Fire House. Methods of combatting the recent series of robberies in the River road section, Cheverly, Bowie and other parts of Prince Georges County will be discussed.

Land, Sea, Air Now Fortified Against Attack

Five Deadly Weapons Are Acquired by Defense Services of U. S.

Copyright by the United Press.

The men charged with the duty of defending American soil have five deadly weapons which they can add to America's arsenal when and if war comes again.

Debate in Congress on ways and means of taking the profit out of war has not interfered with the unceasing search of the Army and Navy for more effective engines of destruction.

The development has extended to all arms of the fighting force—land, sea and air. Some of the weapons still are in the stage where their development is being closely guarded, but others have been perfected to the point where it is possible to describe them in detail.

The proudest achievement of the Army is a new tank. It can go racing across open fields at a speed ranging between 50 and 60 miles an hour. Comparatively small in size, it gains effectiveness because of the fact that it can skim hedges, gullies and all other natural obstacles

It Eliminates Cavalry.

It virtually eliminates cavalry from the scheme of war. Safe behind thick armored plates, two men can deal out wide destruction from this tank. This new instrument of war has passed beyond a theory and is a fact. Factories already are turning out the new tanks and the Army probably will have 60 of them before the end of the year.

Eventually the Army hopes to take two of its new weapons and combine them. Heretofore tanks have been armed with machine guns. The new theory is to replace the machine guns with a deadlier weapon that comes under the general classification of cannon.

The one-pound cannon which the Army now has are fed by hand. That slows down the rate of fire. So experts have turned their ingenuity to the perfection of a cannon that can be fed by mechanical means. They have just about succeeded. The new weapon will be able to fire 100 shots a minute, which makes it almost a machine gun except that instead of firing small bullets it spouts destructive shells.

The next step will be to install the one-pounders in the new tanks, giving the United States a "land battleship" that easily could turn the tide of battle under present fighting conditions.

Much of the next war will be fought in the air, and the Army has devoted considerable attention to antiaircraft guns.

'Stratosphere Gun."

They have come out with what is called a "stratosphere gun." It is a variation of the famous French .75, which was one of the most effective weapons the Allies had in the last war. By pointing the muzzle of this gun straight into the air, the Army artillery can send a shell arching 50,000 feet—higher than airplanes can fly effectively.

The Navy continues its work on "flying battleships." These are planes, armed with machine guns, that have a cruising range of 3,000 miles. They can carry tons of explosives, and their chief virtue is that they can be used for scouting out to sea as well as bombing. Tests on two of these planes are under way. If they work out satisfactorily, the Army plans to order 30. It will take a year to build them.

6 Dutch Planes Rush 15 Million Gold to London

Netherlands Bank Head Insists Attack on Florin Checked.

By the Associated Press.

Basel, Switzerland, April 7.—Dr. L. J. A. Trip, governor of the Bank of the Netherlands, told heads of other central banks in the gold bloc today that attacks on the florin had been "victoriously checked."

The Netherlands' gold stock has diminished, he admitted, however.

He and other bankers here for the monthly meeting of the Bank for International Settlements discussed the effect of depreciation of the Belgian belga.

Jean Tannery, governor of the Bank of France, reported that institution's firm intention to defend the franc "despite the breach in the gold bloc."

By the Associated Press.

London, April 7.—Fears that the Netherlands is going off the gold standard were reflected today with the arrival over the week-end of six Dutch planes carrying a record cargo of gold, valued at $15,000,000, from Amsterdam.

E. L. Franklin, London bullion dealer, said "the Dutch people must have if the back of their minds the feeling they might be called on by their government to declare their gold holdings and fear Holland might take legislative action similar to that taken in the United States."

The flow of gold to London followed a near panic in Amsterdam Friday, and apparently, financial quarters said, was a move by Dutch banks and financial houses preparing for a possible desertion of the gold bloc.

By the Associated Press.

Rotterdam, The Netherlands, April 7.—The S. S. Veendam sailed for the United States today with 3,000,000 guilders (about $1,930,000) in gold aboard.

Departure was delayed because automobiles carrying the gold had to fight a snowstorm. After the liner left, an airplane took off carrying 2,000,000 guilders more in gold to overtake the Veendam at Southampton and place it aboard.

The S. S. Blommersdyk, sailing Tuesday for America, will carry another gold shipment.

Kresge Sales Down 16.2%.

New York, April 7.—March sales of the S. S. Kresge Co. totaled $10,328,161, against $12,320,725 for the same month last year, a decrease of 16.2 per cent.

Turkish Jews Ready To Flee Istanbul

By Palcor Agency.

Jerusalem, April 7.—A report from Istanbul to the Palcor Agency said today 17,000 Turkish Jews, a third of the Jewish population in that country, are ready to flee because of adverse political and economic conditions.

All 17,000 have enrolled with the Zionist Organization in Istanbul as candidates for immigration certificates to Palestine, the reports said.

Increasing restrictions on economic opportunities and political rights were described as reasons for the prospective mass emigration movement.

Mayor Carson To Seek Fourth Riverdale Term

Two Councilmen Also Bid for Reelection; Voting Time Extended.

William A. Carson, Mayor of Riverdale, has announced his candidacy for reelection for a fourth term, in the town elections to be held on Monday, May 6, in the local firehouse.

Councilmen Anton C. Kracke and T. N. Goodwin, of the Third and Fifth Wards, respectively, are also seeking reelection. Councilman T. W. Venemann, C. B. Embrey and W. C. Wedding, of the First, Second and Fourth Wards, and H. C. Weeks, treasurer and holdover officers.

No other candidates for the above-mentioned offices have as yet been announced, but it is conceded that competition will be offered to all of the present contestants. The Organized Opposition Party elected two out of a slate of five in last year's elections.

A referendum will also be held on a bill passed by the late General Assembly which increased the local tax levy from 25 cents to 30 cents. The additional 5-cent levy, which is not effective until January 1, 1936, is for maintenance of garbage collections.

Because of numerous protests during last year's elections, the polls will remain open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., thus allowing a few extra hours for voters to reach the polls.

We Don't Keep a COW

WE are milk men, but we don't keep cows.
We buy milk from farmers.
The milk is trucked to our plant, pasteurized, bottled, and then delivered to your doorstep in clean bottles—200,000 are required for Washington every morning.
For this service you pay at the rate of 13 cents a quart.
The farmer gets 7 cents.
Our net profit is ½ of a cent.
Being milk man to a big city is big business?
Our Company has 218 routes.
It operates 251 automobiles.
It uses 82 horses.
It buys from 765 farmers.
It serves approximately 51,200 families.
Our main job is to provide good milk whenever and wherever it is wanted.
Along with that job we have answered many questions about our business.
Some of these questions have a way of becoming political issues.
Who gets the money, and how much?
What makes the price of milk?
Is the farmer exploited?
Is the consumer gouged?
Is distributor profit excessive?
What is the public interest?
These and other questions will be regularly discussed in this space.

Editorial—Statistical

In response to numerous requests of Civil Service applicants who were too late in registering for one of the recent classes, we have ready for immediate distribution an outline of review studies which was especially prepared for Civil Service applicants by the head of the Editorial Department, who was formerly employed in the Examining Division of the Civil Service Commission. There are about sixty neatly mimeographed parts of practice material on Editing, Manuscript Preparation, Re-writing, Condensing, Proofreading, Abstracting, and Indexing. This is not a correspondence or home-study course. It is recommended only as a review or practice study. Price, $3.00.

WESTERN WONDERLANDS ★ ★ ★ ★ OF COLOR

By Randall Jones.

That the gorgeous color characteristics of regions in Utah and Nevada might be appreciated, Mr. Jones personally photographed various parks in startling color. These remarkable plates reveal startling changes of light and shadow playing upon canyon walls and templed cities of stone. The audience will be shown, step by step, through the amazing wonders of Zion, Bryce Canyon and Grand Canyon National Parks, Kaibab National Forest and Cedar Breaks National Monument. The grandeur of the scenes is breath-taking.

Back To Tilbury Town.

They are carrying the ashes of Edwin Arlington Robinson to Tilbury Town to rest. Which is to say that a quiet New England poet, thrice a Pulitzer prize winner, is dead and will be buried in Gardiner, Me., near the town of Head Tide, where he was born.

There he will join Richard Cory, Annnandale, Captain Craig, the roprobate John Evereldown and the antique Isaac and Archibald. Others of whom he wrote so knowingly are gone to other resting places: the man Flammonde, Fernando Nash and Atherton. But the white gulls—most will remember them in "Tristram"—will be wheeling still; the "sudden hill, bleak, round and high by flame-lit height made higher," against which the vision of the Man Against the Sky first appeared, will stand above his headstone "like a dome against the glory of a world on fire;" and Miniver Cheevy, if he lives, will mourn.

Mr. Robinson maintained in one of his rare interviews that if a man had poetry in him it could not be repressed; if he had none, he would produce only verse. Shy, modest and abhorrent of publicity, he could never for a moment have had his own work in mind. Yet it is plainly evident that he himself was just such a natural-born man of poetry. His mature and sensitive feeling were set in words of a sureness and sense of rhythm such as only an innate genius could have ordered.

This does not mean that he stepped easily into his high position. After two years at Harvard, he was forced to leave for lack of finances following the death of his father. Ultimately he made his way to New York, where he lived variously and always miserably as a janitor, timekeeper and porter. Two years after the publication of his second volume, "Captain Craig," Theodore Roosevelt, then President, discovered his poems and soon arranged a customs house position for the struggling man. In 1921, his "Collected Poems" won him his first Pulitzer award, the honor later being repeated in recognition of "The Man Who Died Twice" and of "Tristram."

Throughout his life he clung to his Yankee heritage of restraint. At times a dry humor crept into his work, generally in the short sketches of people he had known. But mostly his attention was directed to the commonplace events in the lives of simple men, with particular emphasis on the drama of their failures. Through the stark, flowing lines of these descriptions he interwove his own dignified conception of life.

Some years ago he wrote that "only the passage of time can set the seal of authentic genius on anything written today," adding that "whatever laurels I receive must, to be good for anything, be green long after I and my generation have withered." He need never have doubted: they will be.

Efficiency Ratings.

Under the complicated system in vogue in Government offices, efficiency ratings have long been a source of annoyance. Employes have felt that they were graded arbitrarily without adequate regard for the quality or intensity of their work. Real efficiency has been too often obscured by meticulous charts futilely designed to reduce human characteristics to mathematical terms. If this can be corrected by the new system of efficiency ratings just approved by the Civil Service Commission, congratulations will certainly be in order.

Instead of trying to evaluate the services of several hundred thousand employes by figures carried beyond the decimal point, the commission now proposes to substitute such general ratings as "excellent," "very good," "good," "fair," and "unsatisfactory." The new plan will be less discriminating in theory, but in practice it should afford a more reasonable basis for adjusting salaries, awarding promotions and eliminating the "unsatisfactory" from the service.

The task of impartially grading the work of large groups is extremely complicated. Especially is this true when those groups of employes are doing professional work. There is no exact criterion by which the work of one Government lawyer, for example, may be measured against the services of 50 colleagues. Even the best system will afford only an approximation of human skill and energy. In a vast organization like the Government, however, imperfect standards are better than no standards at all. If the simplified plan is impartially administered, it should be a notable improvement over the intricate equations by which ratings are now evolved.

Improvements of this sort are particularly valuable when the merit system is under attack. Aside from the political pressure that substitutes spoils for merit in the awarding of Government positions, some officials have lost faith in the civil service. They see that in some instances it affords protection to incompetent and lazy individuals, thus taking the edge off initiative. So long as this is true, it will be more difficult to arouse enthusiasm in support of the merit system.

It is to be hoped, therefore, that the new efficiency ratings will facilitate both the dismissal of the incompetent and the promotion of the conscientious and capable employes.

The Social Security Bill.

The experts who drafted the legislative proposals contained in the report of the Committee on Economic Security will probably be dismayed by the form in which the social security bill has been reported out of the House Ways and Means Committee. The major defect of the bill is that it attempts to extend too much protection to too many classes of workers. For example, instead of applying the compulsory contributory system of old age pensions to persons earning less than $3,000 per year, as originally proposed, the amended measure would bring all workers under its terms, without regard to the amount of their current earnings. Even $3,000 is a very high figure by comparison with the limitations customarily found in other countries.

To be sure, contributions would be levied only upon the first $3,000 earned, while benefits could not exceed a monthly maximum of $85, after 45 years of employment. Nevertheless, this addition to the numbers of beneficiaries would correspondingly increase the liabilities assumed. Employers would be required to help defray the costs of the system by paying to the Government excise taxes amounting to 1 per cent of their pay rolls and rising ultimately to a maximum exaction of 3 per cent. Insured employes would contribute an equal sum, while beginning with 1937 the Government would transfer to an "old age reserve account" amounts sufficient to meet required payments.

This compulsory system would properly exclude farmers, casual laborers, and certain other classes of workers. However, the bill provides for an elaborate system of pensions for the needy, covering those unable to qualify for contributory benefits. The Federal and participating State Governments would jointly finance this system. Federal contributions would be limited to half the amounts paid by the States, but in no case would they exceed $15 per month for each individual.

In addition to old age pensions, unemployment insurance is provided for by a method of indirection. All employers of 10 or more persons would be required to pay excise taxes beginning at 1 per cent of pay rolls in 1936 and rising to 3 per cent in 1938. While the States might decide for themselves whether to institute any form of compulsory unemployment insurance, the incentive to do so would be very strong, because of a proviso that 90 per cent of this tax may be credited against similar contributions paid into State unemployment insurance funds. The Committee on Economic Security recommended a Federal levy of this sort as a means of removing the unfair competitive advantage that would otherwise be enjoyed by employers operating in States having no system of unemployment insurance.

One of the unique characteristics of the bill is that it leaves the details of the unemployment insurance system to the several States. They may decide to provide more extensive protection than is contemplated by the Federal law, as in case of the Ellenbogen bill applicable to the District of Columbia. They may also decide to exact contributions from employes, although no such levy is suggested in the Federal bill. Cooperating States will be aided by the Federal Government in administering their insurance systems, and the Government will also handle unemployment reserve funds for the benefit of the States.

Furthermore, a newly created Social Security Board would be charged with various administrative duties in addition to making recommendations as to future legislation and general policies. While it seems logical and for some reasons desirable that such a board should be under the jurisdiction of the Department of Labor, it is proposed to make it an entirely independent organization consisting of three appointive members.

If this initial effort to establish a system of Federal old age pensions and provide other forms of social relief were less ambitious and if an attempt had been made to keep costs within reasonable limits, the program would have a much better chance of succeeding. As it is, the heavy burdens which the Doughton bill proposes to place upon industry and upon the Federal Government would doubtless increase the economic insecurity of the workers whom the bill is designed to safeguard against the "major hazards and vicissitudes of life."

Working At Cross Purposes.

The Federal Trade Commission's charge that the NRA rubber code authorities have violated the antitrust laws brings squarely into the open another one of those unresolved conflicts that have arisen on so many occasions because of a lack of coherent, consistent administrative policies.

Although the FTC complains that the rubber industry has disobeyed NRA orders, thereby implying that it has no quarrel with another governmental agency, it is a matter of common knowledge that the NRA has approved code practices that would in the past have been regarded as constituting an illegal restraint of trade. Indeed, the attempts to prevent price cutting through numerous codes, however reasonable they may be, undeniably affect prices and restrict competition to an extent not permitted under an uncompromising interpretation of the antitrust laws.

When the code system was inaugurated, therefore, it was taken for granted that it would result in modification of these laws, although the obscure phrasing of the recovery act left their status far from clear. Existing uncertainties will not be dispelled by isolated complaints brought against the rubber industry or any other organized industrial group charged with violation of the antitrust laws. Whether such complaints are sustained or dismissed in any given instance, the NRA will doubtless continue to approve and help to administer certain code provisions that the Federal Trade Commission considers illegal.

There is only one way in which these two governmental agencies can be prevented from working at cross purposes, to the detriment and confusion of business. That is through clarification of the antitrust laws, and specific authorization of reasonable agreements in restraint of trade in accordance with recognized principles.

Rural Rehabilitation.

Confusion in Administration circles over the status of the rural rehabilitation program is a natural outcome of the legislative botch in which Congress has just indulged. No one seems to know whether subsistence homesteads and rural industrial communities can be developed under the terms of the public work bill. Much less certain is the authority desired by the President to purchase submarginal lands. Although action on the bill has just been completed, congressional leaders are in the ridiculous position of not knowing whether its undefined objectives can, after all, be attained.

One thing is certain. The bill will be carefully scrutinized by the Comptroller General and expenditures that are not authorized will be forbidden. The fact that the Comptroller General's office has already advised members of the Senate that the rural program is not covered by the vague terms of the bill suggests that this important aspect of the most recent recovery venture may be thwarted. In view of the inchoate nature of the so-called Tugwell plan, however, its suspension can be contemplated without any acute sense of loss.

Undoubtedly the drought has created grave problems for the Middle West. Dust storms scattering particles of uprooted soil over half a continent are an ominous warning. They arouse fear that exploitation of lands never entirely suitable for farming may create large desert areas on the great plains. Certainly the Administration ought not to sidestep this problem. It has a definite responsibility to analyze the continued drought in its relations to the national welfare. But this does not necessarily mean that a billion dollars or more should be spent in a vague and ill-considered rehabilitation program.

The public has had no opportunity to appraise the measure intended to aid distressed rural families. Surely an undertaking of this magnitude should be worked out with meticulous care before enormous sums are invested in it. What would be the relationship of "rural rehabilitation" to the AAA? A great deal of talk is heard of moving drought-stranded population to better land. Would this mean more rigid crop restrictions on farms now producing? Obviously the relationship between the AAA and the rehabilitation program ought to be fully explored by Congress and by public opinion before the latter project is inaugurated.

It does not appear likely that the President will ask Congress to amend the much battered work relief resolution specifically to include the rural aid projects. The Administration is already perturbed over the bitter disputes aroused by this measure. If the President considers the submarginal land problem an emergency, it would be much better strategy to send Congress a special message seeking enactment of an entirely new bill. For at best the relationship of work relief to a national land policy is vague. Congress may well insist upon treating the rural rehabilitation plan according to its own merits.

This Cockeyed World.

Edward Lear, inventor of the limerick and literary farceur without equal, even in his most fanciful moments could never have conceived the nonsense soberly reported in a squib bearing a Friedrichshafen, Germany, date line. By telegraph comes the news that the Graf Zeppelin has left for South America on its first trip of the season. Aboard this complex masterpiece of human ingenuity are 15 passengers. In addition, the sailing list includes 50 apes from an animal farm in iron-clad Germany bound for a zoo in the green-mansioned Argentine.

O tempora! O mores!

From the Houston Post.

Preliminary returns from the farm census, the taking of which began in January, reveal that since 1930 the number of farms has increased by probably 500,000. Detailed information on the census is not yet available, but in all probability the majority of the new farms are small ones, opened by families moving out from the industrial and commercial centers.

The old idea of back-to-the-land embraced acquisition of considerable tracts of land and farming on extensive scale. The modern idea, born of the depression, is the acquisition of small tracts and farming intensively. In the new order many large farms have been broken up into little ones. Large tracts of land formerly used for pastures also have been cut up into tracts for cultivation.

There is no doubt that a return to the land by large numbers of the unemployed is one of the important ingredients of the solution of the unemployment and relief problem. Another ingredient is keeping on the farms families already there, i. e., not forcing them to leave by enforcing legislation that drives tenants and sharecroppers into city relief stations.

Needed: A Cleveland.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Even the great agnostic, Robert Ingersoll, admitted that "the universe is governed by law." The idea that law can be violated, with impunity, is too preposterous to deserve comment.

Unfortunately, however, the present Administration decided it could tamper and trifle with law in the vain hope that perhaps in some miraculous manner prosperity and normalcy would be restored. Even the simple law of arithmetic was ignored and defied when we were blandly told that a 59-cent dollar was actually the same as one containing 100 cents gold content. Unthinking people accepted this nonsense because the dollar bill "looked the same." They overlooked the simple truth that the effort to manage the dollar, in order to change the industrial atmosphere, was about as absurd as would be an attempt to alter the weather by manipulating the mercury in a barometer.

What was perfectly apparent to conservative men in the beginning, viz., that no nation could spend, borrow and waste its way out of trouble, is actually beginning to dawn on the "Brain-Trusters." Inwardly, if not openly, they are forced to admit that the NRA and its tarantulalike ramifications is a failure.

This land needs another Grover Cleveland, a man not given to the pursuit of phantoms; a stanch, stable type who believed the law should be obeyed, not violated

Leaving D. C. To Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am leaving beautiful Washington to crime! In more prosperous times I was able to stand the depredations committed against my property and peace of mind. In the last ten years I have furnished some thief with a suit of clothes for every suit I purchased for myself.

Last night two suit cases were stolen from my car, holding all the wearing apparel I had in the world except what I wore. This is the last straw. I am leaving Washington to the thieves, while all the available police force is downtown childishly making chalk marks on tires.

I am convinced that crime pays by the simple total of my losses. And being out of work and at a disadvantage when pitted against the problem of crime, in that respectable people are not permitted to arm themselves against the menace, I would at once turn criminal and arm myself to help me hold what little I have left were it not for my more respectable connections.

If a nation recognizes the fact that it must arm itself to preserve peace, why does that not hold good for the individual?

Rats desert a sinking ship. It might work the other way on land. Respectable people could abandon a beautiful city to the rats as the simplest solution to the problem.

Here is one individual who is leaving for a community where his taxes pay for protection rather than the distorted condition of affairs that hires a small army of bluecoats to play "tit-tat-toe" with colored chalk. BERT L. FORSE.

Washington, April 2.

Sixteen To One.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Whether or not one believes in Karl Marx, teachings of socialism is a question for every man to decide for himself. In one of his articles the writer was struck with the pertinency of this statement:

The materialists, teaching that men are the products of conditions and education, that different people, therefore, are products of different conditions and education, forget that conditions are changed by men and that the educators, too, must be educated.

That this is patently too true needs no further elucidation or proof than the existing economic depression throughout the world. These so-called educators are still preaching a false doctrine concerning the medium of exchange—the thing called money—which has long since been exploded, leaving in its wake ruin, unemployment and misery.

It is true that these "educators" be taught and educated in an advanced philosophy of economics, and I suggest that they study, not a new theory, but a proven success for centuries—bimetallism—or the free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver at nature's ratio of 16 ounces of silver to 1 ounce of gold.

This would produce enough of the precious metals on which international exchange could be standardized, and then proper tariffs and quotas could be agreed upon from a revenue point of view, rather than the protective or prohibitive. Foreign commerce between the nations would be restored, thereby returning to constructive work millions of men with wages and purchasing power. Because of the yearly increase in the production of gold and silver, keeping pace with increasing world population and expansion of trade, the dollar would become more honest and stable in debt paying and purchasing power.

WILLIAM J. DWYER.

Washington, March 25.

Hoffman's Example.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Harold Hoffman's refusal to consider being a candidate for President next year because duty requires all his time and energy in the solution of problems confronting him as Governor of New Jersey is an improvement upon Henry Clay's "I would rather be right than President," though both put obligations ahead of ambition.

This is called a day of racketeer politicians, and it must be admitted that the variety is considerably in evidence. Still there are just as fine ideals of public service, just as scrupulous men in public life as at any time in the past.

I note the splendid example of Gov. Hoffman, young former Representative, who sprang into national prominence last November when he overcame the strong Democratic trend in the Nation and in his State, as evidence—one bit of evidence—that pessimism is overdone.

F Street History.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a recent issue of The Post there was an article about improvement of F street between Eighth and Ninth. About 1900 there was a man named Joseph Keefer, who got up a petition signed by the leading business and professional people thereabouts, which was presented to Congress by Representative Sidney Mudd, of Maryland. It was taken up and referred to Senator McMillan, who was chairman of the District Committee on Improvements. He went to the Commissioner of Patents and together they had the War Department engineers make a bid on the work and drawings.

Keefer's idea was to tunnel through the building, making a way through to G street. McMillan died and his successor never took the project up and so the matter rested until the present.

Informed Mexican.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much interested to read—and clip—those instructive articles in The Post by Dr. Quintanilla on the "Growth of Religious Freedom in Mexico." I think hosts of Post readers will thank you for publishing them. The days of religious intolerance should be past and buried forever.

I heard Dr. Quintanilla speak at the First Baptist Church Sunday evening upon "The Growth of Religious Freedom in Mexico." He is a very well-informed man, and I told him I felt well repaid for coming out that very bad evening.

H. BRADFORD.

Washington, April 1.

Great Britain's White Paper.

It has struck us as grotesque that just the Hitler youth and its education should be represented as the reason for endangering world peace. Whilst in nearly all states youth is being trained in a strictly military way with rifle and machine gun, German Hitler youth is unarmed. As obviously this is known also in London, the emphasis of blame is laid on the spirit—the oft-cited "militaristic spirit" of German youth which is supposed to be so terribly dangerous!

The attempt to saddle Germany with the blame for the increase of British military forces—an increase which in itself is understandable—and for the added expenditure ensuing, is all the less acceptable at a time when, as during the past weeks, in sharp contrast with the active peace efforts of the Fuehrer, the loudest fighting flourishes of trumpets were sounding from Russia. At the Communist Congress and in other speeches and articles, the Russian army was praised as the strongest army in the world, and the Russian air fleet as a great instrument of war. Whilst engaging the whole of diplomacy for a so-called Eastern pact, the official Communist press accompanied this supposed peace step with roaring threats of world revolution. That just Germany is represented as the possible enemy, with such facts present to every one, was bound to give rise, as indicated, to the greatest astonishment.

We can only express the hope that London will interpret correctly the feelings of the German people and will do everything to acknowledge the justification of these feelings. We trust that she will pursue such ways as, on the basis of an accepted German equality, are necessary to discuss in a really friendly form the difficult problems of Europe and bring them to the solution desired by all friends of peace.

(Volkischer Beobachter.)

The Post Impressionist

Must Have Been Veal!

Post Office, Monday.

THAT late luncheon of the Von Neuraths for Sir John Simon has attracted even more attention than its first recorder, Mr. Frederick Birchall, expected. Anyhow, Washingtonian Joseph Danziger has written to the Column criticizing the Column's version of the affair.

You will remember the general circumstances:

Sir John and Capt. Eden were in Berlin about 10 days ago, consulting with Hitler and Baron von Neurath on matters appertaining to the peace of Europe. The baron and his wife had invited Sir John and the captain to lunch at the baron's villa. At the ultimate moment, while the meal was waiting, it was decided that the conferees should all take a snack right where they were. So, presumably, the Von Neurath luncheon was wasted.

This Column, however, went even so far in presumption as to presume that, because decision delayed so long, there occurred a slight singeing of the Von Neurath mutton.

Which is where Mr. Danziger takes issue with us.

We hadn't heard from him since he restored the military genius of Marshal von Hindenburg to that place in our estimation wherefrom a more or less popular lecturer had (almost) toppled it. Now Mr. D. declares:

"Unless your grapevine to Berlin has developed static, it is easy to explain why Sir John Simon turned down that bid to luncheon and chose to share Hitler's frugal sandwiches. I prefer to believe that there was static in your grapevine."

That's kind of Mr. Danziger: he doesn't want to deposit more blame on our humble doorstep than his conscience requires.

Therefore, we shall merely point out that Sir John didn't "turn down" the Von Neurath invitation. The Reichsfuehrer turned it down for Sir John—and for Capt. Eden, too. Herr Hitler said the negotiators had better not squander time from their negotiations.

And Herr Hitler is a dictator.

But we permit Mr. Danziger to continue:

"Anyway, the Gnaedige Frau Barohin would surely not have committed the solecism of serving roast mutton to an English guest. That would be nearly as bad as if an English hostess were to serve coffee to an American. You know, of course, that an Englishman can always tell when he is away from his island, because the coffee is better . . .

"I am sure, had Sir John known that Kalbsmerenbraten and Leipzigeralleriei awaited him at the Neurath villa, not even the alternative of an immediate outburst of war would have kept him away.

"It must have been the saddle of veal. That is the feast's crown when the Germans want to lay it on thick. And with reason: no where is roast veal so delectable, unless it is in Cathay or Hindustan, or some land I have not investigated.

"In the first place, the German saddle is cut from an animal old enough to have acquired stamina—not from the infantile veal of most countries. In the second place, the dish is served with a sauce whose base is pure cream—with plenty of other ingredients.

"Then the Leipzigeralleriei!" rhapsodizes Mr. Danziger. "Even one who is willing to forego vegetables for the rest of his life would fall for that.

"The very sight of the dish as it is borne in on its huge platter would whet the appetite of a Spartan like Hitler himself!

"No, the Baronin von Neurath deserves no sympathy— if your report is correct in suggesting she was prepared to serve mutton in place of the ambrosial viands at her command."

And that's not all. We wish it were—but it isn't. Mr. Danziger winds up by bidding us "have that butler stop 'chilling' the Johanisburger. Next thing you will have him frappe the Burgundy. The Johanisburger should be whirled in a bucket of ice just before serving. But 'chilled?' Honorable horrors!"

All right: we shall cable the requisite order. We confess our ignorance of German wines: we have consumed little of them since we last read (was it in pre-war German?) Byron's call for "hock and sodawater"—almost none since we sampled some very fair 1916 Niersteiner behind the French lines, near Toul, in 1918.

But we do resent Mr. D.'s implication about our treatment of Burgundy. We know something about French wines—and we prefer them to German.

On the other hand, we are ready to make allowance for national pride—which Mr. Danziger appears unwilling to make: At the very conference in question, Herr Hitler was prepared to prove to his English guests that Germany's air-force equalled England's. So why shouldn't the von Neuraths have sought to show Sir John that Teutonic sheep equalled Southdown mutton?

Geography Explains Polish Pact Refusal

As Buffer State Of Europe Her Safety Depends On Russo-German Hostility.

By Lothrop Stoddard.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

POLAND'S refusal to join the "Eastern Locarno" pact so ardently desired by Paris and Moscow must not be construed as meaning that Poland is either anti-French or pro-German. What it does mean is that Poland is in a very ticklish position and that the clear-sighted realists who conduct her foreign policy want to keep their hands free for all eventualities.

Poland's basic problem is its geography. The very lay of the land condemns it to be a rather unstable buffer state lying between two more populous and powerful neighbors—Russia to the eastward and Germany to the west. To make matters even more difficult, Poland is not separated from those neighbors by any natural frontiers. As a crowning handicap, the Poles are an inland people whose country today barely touches the sea at one fiercely contested point. Polish history has been a constant struggle against these natural difficulties. Indeed, for more than a century, Poland disappeared utterly from the map, partitioned between stronger rivals.

The Great War restored Polish independence. As though by a miracle, Poland arose from political death and again took her place among the nations of the earth. In fact, resurrected Poland did very well for herself. Not only were virtually all Poles included within her borders, but likewise several alien minorities. Today, official statistics admit that nearly one-third of the population is non-Polish in origin, and it is probable that these figures underestimate the percentage of those who do not feel themselves Polish at heart.

* * * * *

THE minorities are the Ukrainians, a branch of the Russian stock, who form the bulk of the population in southeastern Poland and who are separated from their kinsmen in the Soviet Union by nothing more tangible than a conventional border line. In Poland's northeastern provinces the minority situation is still more complex, because there a majority of the population are White Russians or Lithuanians. A large unassimilated Jewish element is present throughout Poland, especially in the cities and towns. Finally, Poland's western provinces contain many Germans.

The attitude of these minorities toward the new Polish state is not improved by the manner whereby they were acquired. Poland's rebirth was stormy. In fact, during the early years of her revived national life she fought with every one of her neighbors. Though victorious in these contests, mutual ill-will was generated, and the decade or more of peace which has ensued is too short a period to allow these rancors to die away.

We Americans are apt to fix our attention almost exclusively upon the controversies between Poland and Germany, especially over the Corridor and the anomalous situation of the Free City of Danzig. Now it is true that German-Polish relations are difficult and full of troublesome possibilities. Yet they are by no means the whole story. The feud between Poland and Lithuania is even more bitter; the Polish-Russian boundary is ominously artificial, while Czechoslovakia has not reconciled itself to the frontier which the Poles obtained at its expense.

* * * * *

ALL this means that the new Poland is confronted by grave problems, both within and without. Above everything else, she needs peace and quiet in order to consolidate her domestic situation, build up a solid economic structure, and forge a strong national unity. It must not be forgotten that even the Poles themselves, though all ardent patriots, differ considerably from one another. For more than a century they were politically and economically sundered by the partition of their country. The Poles of Prussia, Russia, and Austria lived under widely diverse conditions and were exposed to very different influences.

The effects of this long period of separation are still visible. The German-trained Pole of Posen or Upper Silesia can not have the same attitude and outlook on life as his blood-brothers reared under the backward, inefficient regime of Czarist Russia or under the easy-going, slipshod regime of the declining Hapsburg Empire. Thus, in order fully to blend and harmonize even the Poles, time is a vital necessity. Polish statesmen might well echo the words of Cavour, who, when the Italian peninsula had been politically unified, remarked: "Italy is made; we must now make the Italians."

The supreme importance of the time element is fully appreciated by Marshal Pilsudski and Joseph Beck, that hard-headed pair who control the policy of their country. It certainly gives the key to their agreement with Germany, which offhand seems a rather strange proceeding. This Polish-German understanding is a classic example of real-politik. There is not an atom of sentiment about it. On the contrary, it is a temporary bargain struck by potential enemies because they feel that, for the moment, they both have something to gain by adjourning their latent quarrel.

* * * * *

THE origin of this agreement makes an interesting story. When Hitler came to power two years ago, France was so alarmed that Paris seriously considered waging what is euphemistically known as a "preventive war." The Polish Ambassador was thereupon instructed to ask the French government whether it intended to smash Hitler's Third Reich before Germany became rearmed as she obviously intended to do. The French said: "No." This meant that Poland would soon be faced by a western neighbor more powerful than itself and absolutely unreconciled to the loss of the Corridor, Danzig, and Upper Silesia, to say nothing of Posen—the long tongue of Polish territory which stretches into Germany scarcely 100 miles from Berlin.

This looked bad for Poland. Fortunately, Germany had grievances elsewhere which it was equally eager to redress. Also, the brand-new Third Reich needed time to consolidate itself and was almost universally unpopular abroad. So the Polish statesmen figured out that Hitler might be open to a deal which would give both countries a breathing spell. Accordingly, the Polish Ambassador at Berlin asked Hitler frankly whether he wanted good or bad relations with his eastern neighbor. The Fuehrer had so much trouble on his hands that he was glad to strike a bargain which was, in effect, a ten-year truce. Wherefore, the Corridor suddenly ceased to be a red-hot danger point, and both governments gave orders to soft-pedal inflammatory propagandas directed against each other.

Poland's refusal to join the Eastern Locarno pact is explained not merely by its truce with Germany, but also by its position as a buffer state. The proposed pact, with its guarantee of mutual armed assistance, does not sit well at Warsaw, because the Poles know that they would inevitably be the storm center of any European war. A Polish statesman is said recently to have remarked that Article I of the pact should read: "The next war shall be fought in Poland." As a matter of fact, the Poles are almost as much afraid of their prospective allies as they are of possible enemies. They feel sure, for instance, that if, under the terms of such a pact, Russian troops should march amicably into their Ukrainian and White Russian provinces or German troops into the Corridor, neither would ever voluntarily march out again. So Poland refuses to commit herself unreservedly to any one and plays essentially a lone hand.

Whether this astute balancing act can continue indefinitely remains to be seen. However, Polish statecraft deems it both possible and desirable so long as Russia and Germany are hostile to one another. The supreme threat to Poland is today, as it has been in the past, Russo-German friendship. But since that seems at present to be impossible, Poland is free to play her chosen buffer role.

300 Will Attend Baptist Session

'Everlasting Gospel' to Be Theme at Staunton.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Staunton, Va., April 7.—"The Everlasting Gospel" will be the theme of the fifty-ninth annual meeting of the Augusta Baptist Association, in the Waynesboro church Tuesday and Wednesday. About 300 persons from the seven counties and four cities in the association's area are expected to attend.

W. H. Smith, jr., of Clifton Forge, is the moderator; the Rev. H. Lee Scott, of Waynesboro, vice moderator; E. L. Jones, Goshen, clerk and treasurer, and Dr. J. W. Wayland, of Harrisonburg, historian.

Fifteen persons, ministers or laymen, have been given places on the program for sermons, addresses, or as leaders of discussions; among them the Rev. S. T. Matthews, D. D., representative of the foreign mission board of the Southern Baptist convention, who will discuss that phase of the denomination's program.

Dr. Hawkins to Head Drive in Cumberland

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 7.—Dr. Arthur H. Hawkins, surgeon, will be leader of the 1935 Community Chest campaign, which opens May 9 and closes May 17, it was announced yesterday by Harvey H. Weiss, president of the Cumberland Welfare Federation. Team captains and workers will be selected later, Weiss said.

Quota for the campaign this year has been set at $57,565 to provide for 11 agencies included in the federation. Campaign headquarters have been opened in the Liberty Trust Building, with Harry M. Thayer, Flushing, N. Y., in charge. Thomas B. Finan is chairman of the campaign committee, which includes Harold W. Smith, Mrs. Morris Rosenbaum and Harvey H. Weiss.

Along The Potomac

Carlisle Bargeron

With Apologies to Mr. Brisbane.

ENROUTE New York to Washington—One has only to get away and travel, say from New York to Washington, to appreciate the broad expanse of this country. Two thousand years ago Chaucer said — or was it Sasser, no, he's a Maryland State senator — well, anyway Mrs. Roosevelt repeated it only a few days ago, that travel broadens one.

BARGERON.

There are growing crops, abandoned plants and junked automobiles, all witnesses to the ingenuity of man.

The train, electrically hauled, speeds along at 70 miles an hour. The passengers do not get cinders in their eyes as they used to. Five hundred years from now there will be no cinders and no eyes. We are just beginning to progress.

And yet some so-called intellectuals say there is no life after death. As a matter of fact, there is death after life.

Why does our Government insist upon paying interest upon its bonds when it could issue noninterest bearing notes? How long are we to persist in this folly?

* * * * *

One hundred years from now this train with 14 well-filled coaches will fly through the air. That's when Mrs. Roosevelt will have to do all the traveling. By the way, in the metropolis there is considerable confusion as to whether what Mrs. Roosevelt said about breach of promise suits was a decree definitely outlawing them. It was not a decree. It was simply her obiter dictum. Breach of promise suits are still permissible in all but New York State. Mrs. Roosevelt would not issue a definite ruling on a matter like this until she is satisfied the country is ready for it.

Do you know what obiter dictum means? You should. Every person when traveling should carry a dictionary. Broader vocabularies make broader thinking. Get a dictionary.

The leading Japanese publisher, Oskawta Sako, asks William Randolph Hearst, America's greatest publisher, what he thinks about things. He replies he thinks they will be all right when the country quits thinking. Our country was getting along all right until it went in for thinking. Wise man, Mr. Hearst.

How long will our Government pay interest on its money when it can issue non-interest bearing notes?

* * * * *

We speed across the Susquehanna River. Used to have to stop and swim across it. The Indians used to paddle canoes across it. The great streams in this country make it utterly necessary that we have a navy second to none. If Claude Swanson and the PWA funds hold out we will have it, too.

There is the Aberdeen Proving Grounds. Earnest, patriotic men are daily proving things for Uncle Sam there. The ancient Egyptians had provers: Read Plutarch's Lives. Did you ever read it? You ought to. Then you will turn a deaf ear to the pacifists who say we do not need proving grounds. Same thing goes for the Edgewood Arsenal.

If one can see so many interesting things on this trip, imagine what he can see on a longer trip. See America first. This is a great old country of ours.

In the diner hungry men and women are eating. Years ago they did not eat. Man has come a long way from his forebears. Some men and women eating on diner while others are not eating at all shows we yet have many problems to solve. Better distribution of our eaters is what is needed, but this can be accomplished best under the capitalistic system. This writer has no patience with those who want to change our form of government.

The coach is literally packed with school girls returning from their week-end visits. They keep up a buzz of idle chatter, inanities of irresponsible and unintelligent youth. Elderly and important men have to take three cocktails to stand their noise. Then elderly and important men get chattery, too. Ah, beautiful young girls. The future mothers of our children. Splendid, intelligent, clean-minded things.

No End of Books

"I Wish I'd Said That!" Being a Little Nosegay of Stories on the Art of Repartee.

By Theodore Hall.

THIS Monday, which for indefinable reasons I find decidedly blue, there's no stamina in me to consider anything more ponderous than a few quips and cranks and jollities. It's not escaped me that my friends have thought me peculiarly witty during these last few days, with a flock of stories to tell which I've just been able to get out through my own chuckles. I've felt very proud of said stories. But, to paraphrase Will Rogers, my friends must have realized that all I know is what I read in a book. Such is the present case, first person confessional.

"I Wish I'd Said That: Being a Discussion of the Art of Repartee by Two Good Listeners" (Simon & Schuster, $1.25) is the handiwork of Jack Goodman and Albert Rice, a couple of cheery young men in the publishing trade. Their book, by descent, is by Joe Miller out of "Etiquette on All Occasions." If you would know what to reply on the spot, instead of the remark you usually think of at home in bed later, when you find you're fighting in the wrong war, when you're an old lady watching the tango, or when somebody says "Oh yeah?" to you, the answers and the technique are all here. Within reason, that is. The authors stress the fact that you've got to be witty on your own feet

* * * * *

NOW what is humor? I'm not going to stay for an answer, remembering that G. K. Chesterton has said that "it would commonly be regarded as a deficiency in humor to search for a definition of humor."

But our authors tackle the question by rule of thumb. Observing nicely that there are two different sorts of repartee, the harmless and the hostile, they go on to point out that the first produces the small and polite chuckle (the "titta-ma-titta," in David Freedman's sparkling bit of onomatopoeia) and the second, when someone is injured and everyone else is pleased, the genuine abdominal chuckle (or, as Mr. Freedman contributes again, the "yok-chik-ma-yok-chik"). With this in mind, the authors present two stories—which, "if they brighten you considerably, if they make you feel, after you've looked them over, that the world is a slightly better place than you had hitherto suspected, then you have a perfectly splendid sense of humor—as far as we are concerned, anyhow."

The first, from Mark Twain, is the simple recital of a fellow's victory in a rough-and-tumble fight. Says he: "Thrusting my nose firmly between his teeth, I threw him heavily to the ground on top of me."

The second is a scene from a W. C. Fields movie, in which we must remember the "particular nasal fury with which Fields delivers his lines." Fields is on the golf links. Approaching the water hole, he takes a mashie, waggles it over the ball, and drives plunk in the water.

At once he whirls upon his opponents, but no one has moved, no one has whispered. All he can find to blame is the caddy, standing innocently some yards behind him. "Don't stand in back of me, boy," says Fields. "Stand over there!" He points to a spot over on the right. The boy obeys. Then there is the same waggling over a new ball, and the same drive into the water.

Fields turns to the caddy in incipient apoplexy. "Why are you standing over there?" he rages. "You're right in my line of vision! Stand over here!" And he points to the very spot the caddy has just left. The boy walks back, saying merely: "But you told me to stand over there, sir."

"Never mind what I told you," cries Fields. "You do as I tell you!"

Par for these stories, say our authors, is one "yok-chik-ma-yok-chik" and one "titta-ma-titta."

* * * * *

PRETTY acid toward the use of such garden-variety comebacks as "Oh yeah?—Says you!—So what!" our authors advise you when next you encounter one of these "Yawn-Spawners," to reply, with all stops pulled out on admiration tremolo: "I wish I'd said that!" The only point is that it might not register.

Then one by one they take up the various species of repartee. "The Law of the Bungle" is illustrated, for example, by this little gem. A young man found himself seated at a banquet beside the eminent Chinese diplomat, Wellington Koo. Decidedly stuck for something to say to the Chinese gentleman, he finally produced this minor masterpiece of faux pas: "Likee soupee?" Mr. Koo smiled and nodded. A little later, when he was called upon for a few words, Mr. Koo rose and made a brilliant talk in flawless English. With the applause still resounding, he sat down, turned to the young man, and said: "Likee speechee?"

For other bungles there was the preacher, hurrying through his sermon, who placed his hand on his heart and told his rather incredulous congregation: "My friends, I have in my heart a half-warmed fish"—think it over—and also the Senator who got up recently on an Independence Day platform and gave us this immortal contribution to historical acumen: "The Fourth of July is a peculiarly American institution!"

* * * * *

THE Double-Cross, deliberate mis-interpretation and the bludgeon in repartee, has this little tale to exhibit it. Rossini, the composer, was dining out with a host who set an extremely thin table. A mere snip of this and a snack of that, and by the time coffee was served Rossini was writhing with hunger. "I do hope," said his host nicely, "that you will do us the honor of dining here again." Rossini put down his coffee cup and answered briskly: "Certainly! Let's start now!"

And what could be a better example of the Velvet Glove style of repartee than the old lady who watched a couple dancing the tango and then muttered: "I suppose it's all right if they really love each other." Or of the Far Fetch than Ring Lardner's alibi to an invitation: "I can't come—it's the children's night out and I have to stay home with the nurse."

Messrs. Goodman and Rice have dozens and dozens of these to tickle your ear. When you set out on the hazardous path of rolling your own repartee, they offer these counsels—1. Keep trying. 2. Edit your conversation and try your maiden efforts out on yourself first. 3. Stay away from the Yawn-Spawners, however attractive. 4. Avoid bad taste—know your audience. 5. Make your remark relevant—don't drag in a quip by the heels. 6. Watch your delivery—the "dead pan" delivery is much the best.

Now this matter of repartee is all clear, isn't it? Or are you feeling as puzzled as Groucho Marx, who was telling about his African hunting trip: "One night I shot an elephant in my pajamas. How he got in my pajamas I don't know!"

Striking Omissions

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

FOR a whole year the New York Sun has been carrying on a most interesting series of daily publications from individual contributors, who have written out the list of the 10 plays they have most enjoyed, as they look back over a lifetime of theater attendance. An enormous number of readers have taken up the Sun every evening during the past year, and turned first of all to the page containing the list. Among the contributors were Booth Tarkington, George Ade, Lillian Gish, Fanny Hurst, James Hilton, Sinclair Lewis, Hugh S. Johnson, Carolyn Wells, Thornton Wilder, Mary Anderson, Elmer Rice, Grantland Rice, Don Marquis, Viola Allen, the Rev. Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, Eva Le Gallienne, Henrietta Crosman, Zane Grey, Helen Hayes, Otis Skinner, Daniel Frohman, Jane Cowl, William Lyon Phelps, Rudy Vallee, Irvin S. Cobb, Mayor La Guardia, William Beebe, etc.

The list of 10 best plays in a lifetime were all tabulated and the results printed with highly interesting comment in the issue of the Sun for Saturday, March 9. This page of the Sun should be preserved, as it is a contribution to the history of the theater in America. William Shakespeare won by a good lead; here is the list:

* * * *

"Hamlet"	80 votes
"Rain"	64 votes
"What Price Glory"	46 votes
"Cyrano de Bergerac"	44 votes
"Peter Pan	41 votes
"The Jest"	40 votes
"The Green Pastures"	40 votes
"Journey's End"	36 votes
"Reunion in Vienna"	30 votes
"The Cherry Orchard"	25 votes

As will be seen by the number of votes cast, it was an intensely individual affair; a great many votes showed individual preferences. The most striking omissions from the names of dramatists were Isben and Bernard Shaw, though, of course, they received some votes.

With Mickey on the Nile.

When Cleopatra ruled the Nile
And lovers weren't near;
When Antony might flee a while
And Caesar disappear,
The queenly beauty was not bored
On barge, in tent or house—
Oft in her solitude she roared
At pranks of Mickey Mouse.

II.

The stately queen craved company
And loved her good clean fun;
She liked conviviality
'Neath Egypt's boiling sun;
She was not at her best alone—
It wasn't just her style,
But never did she sit and moan,
With Mickey on the Nile.

III.

When Cleo in a bitter mood
Committed suicide,
It wasn't o'er a rebuff crude
Or any wounded pride;
She came back home quite low that day
Despondent, angry, sore—
For she'd sat through a Mickey play
That she'd seen twice before!

IV.

When Rameses the Second reigned
And raised 300 young
Diversions very often waned
And time quite heavy hung;
To parlor games he would not stoop—
He kept the kids' hearts light
By shouting, "Children Betty Boop
Is playing Thebes tonight!"

V.

When workers on the pyramids
Got home from work, I bet
They washed their mugs and took the kids
Down to a nickelet;
There was a Disney near the Sphinx
Who gave all Egypt fun,
And Egypt also had, methinks,
A Roxy Number One.

VI.

The picture funnies all were there
Through all the dynasties;
The Ptolemys all had their share
Of Silly Symphonies:
They've found 'em in the ruins, yes—
Their antics quite the same—
So after all these years I guess
We now know who to blame!

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Salisbury, Md., April 7.—Extending the Boy Scout program on the Eastern Shore and in lower Delaware, the Wilmington Council of the organization has sent Charles R. Andrews, jr., to make his headquarters here as field executive for Sussex County in the neighboring State and in Somerset, Wicomico, Worcester and Dorchester counties in Maryland.

Stanley M. Woodhead has been named executive for Kent County, Delaware, and for Talbot, Queen Anne's, Caroline, Cecil and Kent Counties of Maryland. His headquarters will be at Dover.

Tugwell Can Restate Federal Land Policies

New Assignment Offers Chance To End Inconsistencies Of Relocation And Rehabilitation.

As former president of the Dry Farming Congress and a veteran former Congressman from Wyoming, twice majority floor leader, the author of the following article is particularly well qualified to discuss the implications of the Administration's rural relief program.

By Frank W. Mondell.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

IT IS announced that Mr. Tugwell is slated to have charge of all of the land utilization and rural rehabilitation work that has been undertaken or is in contemplation by the Administration. This active and efficient gentleman is thus afforded a rare opportunity to check some of the airy enthusiasm which has developed in connection with this wide range of undertakings and bring them within some reasonably correlated plan. He may thus eliminate some of the inconsistencies between various features of far-reaching purposes, some of which at least are highly questionable.

The extent to which the taxpayer is to be called upon to finance an expensive plan of re-locating and permanently establishing individual citizens, is one that is entitled to more thoughtful consideration than it appears to have had up to this time. The subsistence homestead plan, which apparently contemplates home-ownerships to afford an oportunity of partial independence through limited agricultural operations, supplemented by industrial employment in small local plants, has a sympathetic appeal. Yet, it bristles with questions and problems difficult of solution and involves a multitude of doubts as to a successful outcome.

Clearly the Government can not be charged with the duty of transplanting all, or in fact any very considerable number of citizens who do not find their surroundings wholly favorable or satisfactory. Nor is it called upon to furnish assurance of permanent relief from all the vissicitudes which necessarily surround human existence. This is emphasized by the high cost, thus far indicated, per person or family provided for.

* * * *

THE subsistence homestead plan has at least the virtue of a laudable purpose of establishing ownerships, removed from centers of dense population, under conditions that it is hoped will establish reasonable independence and security. When we turn to other regions we learn of plans, purposes and operations which are curiously inconsistent with these ideas of ownership and independence. It is proposed, we are told, to remove from submarginal lands, whatever that may mean, people who have voluntarily established themselves on such lands. This would inevitably result in reducing land and home ownership, even though it is coupled with a hazy and indefinite purpose of re-establishing some of these people on fat and fertile areas. This process, mostly proposed in the far West, goes quite to the limit in substituting for individual, preference, and personal selection of home areas, a policy of Federal supervision and control of the most doubtful character.

An unfortunate condition of extreme drought in regions that are never blessed with abundant rainfall has afforded those who are disposed to set themselves up as the guardians of human destiny an alleged reason or excuse for these plans. This process of official unsettling of settled areas is so utterly contrary to the policy that has resulted in our wide-spread development that it certainly should not be undertaken, if at all, in the wholesale reckless manner which is now, apparently, contemplated.

We have had other periods of severe drought in the West; periods in which the onward march of settlement was halted, even days of temporary retreat. Thanks to the courage and fortitude of the American pioneer, these were followed by successive periods of advance with the result that vast areas that at one time were considered debatable regions of settlement have been conquered and made highly productive.

Even the dust storms have been known since the days of the earliest overland adventurer. The hot southwest winds have time and again taken their toll of at least a portion of the dry-land farmer's crops. The cultivation of these lands has reduced the run-off and increased the amount of the falling moisture which penetrated the soil thus tending to increase humidity. Notwithstanding the present period of drought the American people are not prepared to admit, and certainly the meteorologists would not agree, that there was any sign of a permanent tendency toward increased aridity.

* * * *

TEMPORARY relief is of course essential; permanent abandonment, and with it a large reduction of land owners, is unthinkable. The theory that the abandonment of so-called marginal lands is in the interest of the reduction of agricultural production, which has been urged and aided by the Administration, has little force, even assuming that limited agricultural production is wise.

These so-called marginal areas have, as a whole, added little to the marketed production of surplus crops. They have supported, not opulently, but in general, reasonably well a high independent home-owning class of citizens. Some of these may, in a period of extraordinary drought and depression be disposed to accept the comparative pittance which the Government apparently proposes to pay them for their lands. In the main, they are disposed to retain their home ownerships in the well-grounded expectation of better days and conditions.

Any policy which sets up, establishes, and carries out a theory of reduction of individual land ownership is one that conflicts with every American tradition. It flies squarely in the face of what is assumed to be the Administration's theory of encouraging opportunities for land and home ownerships. Mr. Tugwell will perform a great public service if he can bring the Government land policies and home land aid within more reasonable bounds both as to character and expenditure.

Mystery Assailant Hunted in Crisfield

Sought to Attack at Least 3 Women of Town.

By the Associated Press.

Crisfield, Md., April 7.—A mysterious assailant who has molested at least three women here was the object of a police investigation today.

According to reports filed with local authorities, the man secretes himself behind telephone poles after dark, and seizes his victims as they pass. In one instance a woman reported she had been grabbed by the ankle, but had broken away from her assailant. A young girl told officers a man had attempted to throttle her as she entered the yard of her home. Marks of the fingerprints, she said, remained on her throat for hours afterward.

Another case reported involved an attempted attack on a young married woman.

In each instance the women screamed and the assailant fled. Descriptions of the man tallied in all three cases.

Rich Broker Ends His Life

Bowen Tufts Found Dead From Auto Fumes After Receivership Action.

By the Associated Press.

Winchester, Mass., April 7.—Bowen Tufts, 50-year-old vice president and manager of the Boston Investment Banking Firm of C. D. Parker & Co., and officer of 48 other corporations, who was named only yesterday in a $2,100,000 corporation collapse suit, was found dead in the garage of his palatial home today. The medical examiner, William H. Kelehen, gave a suicide verdict.

The medical examiner said the wealthy broker's body was found lying near the rear of his automobile, the engine of which was still running, and that the doors of the garage were shut. Catherine Daly, a maid, discovered the body and notified police. Death was due to carbon monoxide poisoning.

Members of the family said Tufts pursued his hobby of water color painting until a late hour last night. They insisted death was "purely accidental." R. H. Williams, a brother-in-law, said Tufts informed him last night that he was going to North Conway, N. H., today to bring home his 23-year-old son, Bowen C. Tufts, Yale University student, who had been recuperating there from a serious skiing accident.

The widow, Mrs. Octavia Williams Tufts, who was in Washington attending a National Red Cross conference, returned home late today by plane.

"Johnny, what is a columnist?"

"A columnist, teacher, is when a little boy hides behind the sofa and then tells on Sister, only he's grown up and writes for the newspapers."

But is little Johnny right? Are columnists merely a depraved group of men who see the world through a keyhole? Let's look at a few columnists and find out.

For instance, meet Carlisle Bargeron, who takes you "Along the Potomac" in The Washington Post each morning.

You know, in times like these, with Blue Eagles and New Deals and alphabetical bureaus and Congressmen everywhere, everything is not all quiet along the Potomac, and readers can not afford to miss any part of the ever-changing scenes of official . . . and unofficial . . . Washington.

And how better could you view these scenes than through the witty, brilliant column, "Along the Potomac?" Bargeron's comments on current problems . . . from the utilities question to the tell-tale gravy spot on Senator Whoozis' vest . . . are sometimes sympathetic, sometimes critical . . . often sadly cynical . . . but always entertaining. Thousands turn to his column, on the Page Opposite Editorial, every morning.

To his admirers (who always agree with him), Bargeron is a smiling, cherubic little man with Truth shining from his brow . . . but to other readers (who search his comments every morning to find something with which to disagree), he is a Fiend in Human Form who, very probably, eats raw beefsteak and frightens innocent little children just for the fun of it. Actually, he is neither, but he does delight in stabbing his facile pen deep into the starched bosoms of Stuffed Shirts . . . political and otherwise. He writes of Things as They Are . . . and as he sees them.

You'll enjoy Carlisle Bargeron's daily column, "Along the Potomac," and you'll find it each morning on the Page Opposite Editorial in

The Washington Post.

Stock Exchange Awaits Names Of New Regime

Official Nominations, With Gay for Head, Are Due Today.

Copyright, 1935, by the United Press.

New York, April 7.—A new management for the stock exchange was in prospect tonight as Wall Street awaited nominations of the official committee tomorrow with a ballot headed by Charles G. Gay to be president.

The "younger element" prevailed. They had sniped at Richard Whitney off and on—beginning when the plan to move the exchange to New Jersey was discussed—and had carried on through the difficulties of rearranging trading to suit rules of the Securities and Exchange Commission. But the "younger element" chose as their presidential candidate a veteran of Wall Street. Gay has been a member of the exchange for 24 years and is senior partner in one of the oldest houses in the financial district.

Gay a Conservative.

At 59 he is anything but an extremist. He is of the conservative school, believes definitely that there is a primary place for the stock market in the Nation's financial affairs, and feels that the market at present is just going through one of its trying periods and that the trading activity will increase.

Since the knowledge became general that Gay was to succeed Whitney, Wall Street attention has been centered on the nominations vacancies on the governing committee. This, to be announced tomorrow, will indicate whether the younger element has prevailed completely in opposition to what they claimed was "cliquish control" of the Nation's largest security market.

Idle in February Total 13,378,000

Drop of 269,000 From January Figure.

New York, April 7.—The total number of persons unemployed in the United States declined from 13,657,000 in January to 13,378,000 in February, according to the Business Conditions Weekly of the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Unemployment in February was only slightly lower than in the corresponding month last year when the figure was 13,621,000, and it was considerably higher than the low for the recovery movement reached in May last year when the figure was 12,398,000.

Unemployment in February was also larger than in September, 1933, showing that no permanent progress has been made in the solution of the unemployment problem since the first six months after the bank panic in March, 1933, when the number of unemployed declined from the depression's peak of 16,814,000, to 12,913,000.

Investment Company Averages Rise 6%

New York, April 7.—The investment company common stock index advanced with the general stock market during the past week, as evidenced by the averages compiled by Distributors Group, Inc. The average for the common stocks of ten leading management companies, influenced by the leverage factor, stood at 8.91 at the close of April 5, a rise of 6 per cent compared with 8.41 on March 29.

The average of the mutual funds closed at 10.25 compared with 10.02 at the close of the previous week.

Foreign Exchange Fluctuations Emphasize Our Responsibility

Must Eliminate, Instead of Perpetuating, Economic Rigidities.

Must Stop Following the Policies Suitable for Only Debtor Nations.

ROBEY'S REVIEW

of Finance, Economics, Business and Government appears every Monday morning on the Financial and Business page of The Washington Post.

From a financial point of view last week was noteworthy primarily because of developments in the foreign exchange markets. Apprehension grew by leaps and bounds over the ability of the remaining members of the gold bloc to withstand for long the pressure to which they are being subjected. The consensus now clearly is that it is only a matter of time—and of a relatively short time at that—until there will be no more deflections from the gold standard. In general only France is conceded as having a chance of staying on gold. Whether, with the rest of the world off gold, France would consider it to her advantage to maintain convertibility of her currency into metal, is another question.

For this country the development of such a situation involves two more or less distinct problems. The first is the effect of such currency uncertainty upon our business structure and especially upon our price level. The second is its effect upon our willingness to accept the responsibilities of creditor Nation, or, more bluntly, upon our willingness to take the leadership in breaking the trend toward nationalism throughout the world.

Insofar as the first of these problems is concerned the answer is relatively simple. It is that another period of currency uncertainty will have an unfavorable effect upon our business structure and our price level. It will make it all the more difficult for business men to plan, will make them less sure as to what the monetary policy of our own Government will be, will make it more difficult for them to sell abroad, and will make them more fearful of the impact of foreign competiton in both this country and foreign markets.

Creditor Nation Problems Not so Easily Solved.

The second problem—the effect of renewed currency uncertainty upon ou willingness to accept the responsibilities of a creditor nation—can no' be disposed of so easily. It strikes at the heart of many of the major economic policies we have been following for the past several years. In general, these policies may be summarized under two heads: (1) the practice of permitting the development of, and then attempting to perpetuate, economic rigidities in our business structure, (2) the determination to have a favorable international balance in both visible and invisible items, or in both the shipment of goods and in capital movements and payments for services.

Under these two general heads come a host of practices that have tended to bedevil not only our own economy, but the economies of all the foreign nations with whom we come into contact, either directly or indirectly. And so far there is no evidence of a change in the trend. On the contrary, we still appear to be working on the assumption that the proper method for curing the ailment is the injection into the body economic of more of the germs that caused the disease.

Thus, for example, the rigidities that developed in our business structure previous to 1929, and that the Hoover Administration, in its limited way, attempted to support, have been the object of much of the New Deal legislation. Outstanding in this particular are the rigidities in the price level—rigidities that are possible only through the existence of monopolies, either formal, through corporate organization, or informal, through domination by one firm or general agreement.

NRA Greatly Increased Price Rigidities.

That such monopolistically created price rigidities covered an appreciable portion of the economic system from 1929 through 1932 is not open to question. Undeniable proof of it is provided in the uneven decline of various prices during the period. But even so, the extent of such rigidities was small in comparison with what it has become under the NRA. This, too, is a conclusion that scarcely any longer can be open to question.

In the same way other features of the New Deal have tended to increase, rather than lessen, the rigidities in our economic system. The AAA, while claiming to be for the purpose of balancing the supply to the demand, has been in reality nothing more nor less than the creation of a monopoly in agriculture—a monopoly that has differed economically from our earlier trusts primarily in that it is run by and subsidized by the United States Government. If one doubts this, it would be well for him to think over what the position of agriculture would be should the AAA be discontinued. Quite obviously it would be for all practical purposes in just as bad shape as it was when AAA was established.

In the case of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation in its loans to railroads and its capital contributions to the banks, as well in several of the lesser New Deal organizations, this attempt to maintain the rigidities established earlier has been evident. Insofar as the domestic policies of the New Deal are concerned, then, one may say that virtually the whole attempt has been to prevent the development of that flexibility in the economic structure which experience shows is essential in a system of private ownership.

Foreign Policies Also Have Followed Old Trend.

On the international side the policies followed in the last two years also have been little more than a magnification of the policies followed before 1933, New Deal policies, just as Hoover policies, have been designed to maintain for this Nation a favorable visible balance of trade in spite of our being a creditor Nation on invisible items.

Under Hoover this attempt was made through the creation of an unscaleable tariff wall. Under the New Deal this tariff wall has been heightened and at the same time an attempt has been made to enable American exporters to undersell their competitors in the world markets. All of this has come about through the devaluation of the dollar. By this devaluation the tariff wall was increased by aproximately 70 per cent and the price at which American producers could sell abroad was lowered by approximately 40 per cent.

If we were a debtor nation such policies would not be of vast world significance. For the mere fact that we were a debtor nation would prove that in the aggregate we were at a disadvantage in the world markets, or more accurately, that in order to hold our domestic economy intact we must sell more commodities abroad than we buy. But for a creditor nation to follow such policies is an entirely different matter. For just as the fact of being a debtor nation proves that the country must have a favorable visible balance, so the fact a country is a creditor nation shows that it must buy more goods abroad than it sells.

If the creditor nation fails to do this, if it insists upon having a favorable visible balance and adopts its policies to that end, the result can be only one thing. That is stagnation of world trade. For the debtor nations can pay only in goods. If they are prohibited from doing this they either gradually will be drained of their banking reserves and sooner or later will have to suspend gold payments, or they will have to protect themselves by tariffs, trade restrictions, embargoes, exchange controls, etc. In both cases international trade will decline and ultimately, if the trend is not broken, will come to an almost complete stop.

To reverse the trend it is imperative for the creditor nation to reverse it policies. It must take the lead in establishing conditions whereby the debtor nations can be assured that their monetary systems, and economic structures, will not be wrecked by the policies of the creditor nation.

Until there is such a reversal of policy on the part of the creditor nation, which means until the United States changes its policies, the drive toward nationalism is inevitable. And as this drive is continued the standard of living of the peoples of the world gradually will be driven lower and lower, and the problem of recovery will become more and more difficult.

Earned surplus including the net income for the past fiscal year totalled $9,651,137, bringing the combined surplus to $24,025,619.

In making public the annual report the directors also announced the declaration of an annual dividend of $2 and a special dividend of 50 cents on the common A shares an an annual dividend of 20 cents and a special dividend of 5 cents on the common B shares, payable April 19.

American Water Works & Electric Co. for the year ended February 28, reports net earnings equivalent after payment of preferred dividends, to 98 cents a share on its common stock compared with $1.35 a share for the year ended February 28, 1934. Gross for the 12 months was $46,475,251, compared with $43,222,468 in the previous similar period.

Nash Motors Co. has declared a dividend of 25 cents a share, payable May 1 to stockholders of record April 15. For the quarter ended February 28, which includes December, 1934, the company reported $405,905 loss, of which $181,174 represents depreciation of property, plant and equipment.

Steel Industry Last Year Lost 25½ Millions

4-Year Deficit Reaches $285,000,000, Says Institute Report.

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 7.—The American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today that the steel industry incurred an aggregate loss of $25,500,000 in 1934, a total four-year loss of $285,000,000, or more than $3 on each ton of steel ingots produced during the period.

The estimates were based on financial reports from 23 companies representing more than 89 per cent of the ingot producing capacity of the entire industry, the institute said.

The loss in 1933 was estimated at $77,000,000 and in 1932 at $166,000,000. In 1931 the estimated deficit was more than $17,000,000.

The institute said that the 1934 total of $457,843,000 paid in wages and salaries included approximately $100,000,000 resulting from increases in hourly wage rates and from added employment under the steel code. For every ton of steel ingots produced during 1934 the industry paid out more than $18 in wages and salaries, the institute reported. Stockholders' dividends amounted to 60 cents a ton in the same period.

The dividends on all classes of steel company stocks approximated $16,000,000, little more than one-half of 1 per cent on stockholders' investments, the institute reported.

Production of steel ingots during 1934 aggregated 25,263,569 gross tons, compared with the production of 22,594,079 gross tons in 1933 and 13,322,833 gross tons in 1932. Production in 1931 was 25,192,715 gross tons.

The institute said the composite average price of important steel and iron products during 1934 was only 11 per cent over the average for 1932, described as the depression's low-point year. The average now was declared 32 per cent below that for 1932, the postwar peak for steel prices.

Surplus Freight Cars Show 14,960 Decrease

Class I railroads on March 14 had 305,143 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was a decrease of 14,960 cars compared with February 28, at which time there were 320,103 surplus freight cars.

Surplus coal cars on March 14 totaled 68,450, a decrease of 9,887 cars below the previous period, while surplus box cars totaled 187,391, a decrease of 4,222 cars compared with February 28.

Banks Are Now Turning Toward Longer Maturities, Survey Says

Institutions Which Have Restricted Holdings to Notes and Certificates Have Been in the Market for the Shorter Treasury Bonds.

New York, April 7.—A perceptible change in investment policy of banks and other institutions is noted by Charles E. Quincey & Co. who state there is a growing preference now for longer and medium maturities as against the short-term maturities recently in high favor with institutional investors. Several metropolitan banks, which have traditionally confined their holdings to notes and certificates, have, in recent months, entered the market for the shorter Treasury bonds, the "desire to augment income being fostered by a large increase in deposits and excess reserves of member banks without a corresponding rise in demand for commercial loans."

"A more tolerant attitude toward longer term issues has been developing very gradually," says the firm. "There have been few instances where banks have exchanged the note issues maturing in 1935 and 1936 for the longest Treasury bonds, the new 25-year 2½s which at present afford the highest yield. Instead, the tendency has been for those dissatisfied with the scant return on the note issues maturing in 1939 and 1940 to purchase the 3¼s of 1941 having only a slightly longer life, but affording a substantially higher yield. As the price of the 3¼s has advanced under this influence, some more enterprising investors have exchanged them for the 3¼s of the 1943-40 and 1943-41.

"This market, so dominated by the emphasis placed upon maturities, has led to strange preferences. For instance, Home Owners Loan Corporation 2¾s, 1949-39 have been noticeably favored over the 3s, 1952-44. The 2¾s closed Saturday at 100 10-32, showing a yield of only 2.67 per cent, whereas the 3s closed at 101 28-32, to yield 2.77 per cent. The lower yield on the 2¾s might be partially explained by the shorter maturity and lower premium. In the case of long-term bonds, one may question whether a variation of .10 per cent seems to be fully merited by a difference of two years and nine months in maturity."

"Judging from the present market, it is reasonable to assume that the corporation will continue to issue 2¾s or reduce the rate to 2¾ per cent. In any case, the brunt of any adverse effect from the increased issuance of bonds will probably fall on the 2¾s."

Waste Paper Men Accuse Mills, NRA

New York, April 7.—Charging that the NRA has enabled the leading paper board mills of the country to co-operate in restraint of trade and thereby oppress the thousands of waste paper dealers from whom they buy their raw commodity, C. H. Lipsett, publisher of the Waste Trade Journal, has sent a telegram to the chairman and members of the Senate Finance Committee requesting that the committee investigate the monopolistic activities of the board mills.

"The NRA," said Mr. Lipsett, "has enabled the board mills to openly flout the anti-trust laws. Through their code they have banded themselves together to force the price of waste paper to so ruinously low levels that thousands of waste paper dealers are faced with bankruptcy.

"While depressing the price of their raw material on the one hand, on the other they have advanced the prices of their board and the consumers of their product have been compelled to pay these advances. If any of the waste paper dealers have not been living up to the NRA working-hour and wage schedules, it is because of the oppressive tactics by these board mills."

Farm Products Rise Briskly During Week

Live Stock, Butter and Vegetables All Take Upward Swing.

By the Associated Press.

Farm price advances were quite general the first week of April. Grain, live stock, dairy and poultry products, potatoes, and onions were conspicuous for sharp market upswings, some of them to new high points for the season.

Corn led the grain market with a 5-cent rise which wiped out the declines of the month before. Rye and flax rose 1 cent to 3 cents. Millfeeds, because of the poor demand at this season, did not advance with the grains. Fat cattle reached a new Chicago top of $14.65 per 100 pounds and hogs reached $9.30.

Butter gained 3 cents, returning to the level of mid-February. Cheese advanced a fraction and eggs moved up another cent contrary to usual spring price trend. Poultry markets held values well.

Potatoes made the first sharp rise of the season, based on Western shortage. Gains of 5 cents to 15 cents per 100 pounds were numerous, and the price at Maine shipping points has doubled as compared with the lowest of the spring decline. Onions reached new high points with tops of $2.75 per 50 pounds in Michigan and top of $3 in Pittsburgh.

Principal and semi-annual interest (May 1 and November 1) payable at any Federal Land Bank or any designated agency. Coupon and registered Bonds interchangeable in denominations of $10,000, $5,000, $1,000, $500 and $100. Exchanges of coupon Bonds for registered Bonds and changes of registration may be effected at the Division of Loans and Currency, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C. Redeemable as a whole or in part on any interest date on and after May 1, 1945 at 100% and interest.

The Supreme Court of the United States has upheld the constitutionality of the Act creating the Banks and the provision exempting their obligations from Federal, State, municipal and local taxation. The exemptions include exemption from surtaxes on income from the Bonds. The transfer of the Bonds by inheritance or gift, etc., is subject to taxation under any applicable valid laws providing for the taxation of transfers of personal property.

The Bonds are eligible for investment by savings banks under the laws of a majority of the States, including New York and Massachusetts.

The proceeds of this issue of Consolidated Bonds, together with cash on hand, are to be used to retire the $162,515,960 5% Bonds of the individual Banks which are being called for payment May 1, 1935.

On behalf of the twelve Federal Land Banks and under the direction of Charles R. Dunn, their Fiscal Agent
these Bonds are offered at:

100¾% and interest, to yield about 3.16%
to the first redeemable date (May 1, 1945) and 3.25% thereafter to redemption or maturity

Definitive Bonds will, it is expected, be ready for delivery May 1, 1935. To the extent that holders of 5% Bonds called for redemption agree, prior to the closing of the books, to surrender them on the payment date at 100% of their face value in part payment for these Consolidated 3¼% Bonds, they are to receive, so far as practicable, preferential treatment.

DENNIE'S NURSE, LOUISE, RECEIVES A VISIT FROM HER MOTHER WHICH THREATENS TO RUIN JIM BIFF'S CHANCES AS A SUITOR FOR LOUISE'S HAND. BILL BIFF MAKES HER FURIOUS, AND THAT ISN'T ALL. 4-8
I WISH YOU'D BEEN HERE YESTERDAY WHEN MOTHER CAME. BILL BIFF WAS HERE AND HURT HER FEELINGS. NOW, I'M AFRAID SHE WON'T LIKE JIM, JUST BECAUSE HE'S BILL'S BROTHER.
WHAT'D BILL DO, LOUISE?
OH, HE WAS MAKING FUN OF MOTHER, AND SHE HEARD HIM.
THAT'S TOO BAD. BILL'S ALWAYS GETTING INTO TROUBLE WITH HIS CLOWNING.
MOTHER WAS PEEVED ANYWAY, BECAUSE SOME OLD WOMAN BUMPED INTO HER WITH AN APPLE CART JUST BEFORE SHE GOT HERE.
REALLY?
YOU KNOW, I'VE SEEN THAT APPLE WOMAN AROUND HERE SEVERAL TIMES BEFORE. THERE'S SOMETHING FAMILIAR ABOUT HER. I THINK SHE WAVES TO DENNIE. THE NEXT TIME, I'M GOING OUT AND SPEAK TO HER.

More Calamity.

THE Middle West was full of dust upon a recent day; the farmers saw, in deep disgust, their wheat fields blown away; they saw their haystacks soaring high, their barbed wire fences rake the sky, and everything was whizzing by, the elements felt gay. The wind went by with shrieks and howls, through country and through town, it bore away stray dogs and fowls, and all things not nailed down; the elements got down to tacks and tore the shingles from men's shacks, and upset corncribs, bins and racks, all nature wore a frown. In recent years that region's known disasters by the score; no sooner has one evil flown than there will come some more; the farmer tries to raise some oats to feed his kangaroos and goats and pay off sundry bankers' notes that make him walk the floor. The oats come up all bright and green and promise him a yield; and then a storm of dust is seen to tear up all the field; and if the dust storm doesn't come, a scorching drouth will make things hum, and he's so bitter and so glum his grief can't be concealed. And if the drouth should be mislaid, he still must know despair; the waters wild will make a raid on farm lands everywhere; he'll see the rivers overflow, his cattle drowning as they go, and nine varieties of woe will make him tear his hair. He well might say, "What is the use? I will forsake the soil; the farm no longer will produce fair pay for heavy toil;" but still he goes forth, whistling tunes, to plant his nutmegs and his prunes, and hopes to gain some picayunes to make the kettle boil.

Society Riders Find Relaxation On Bridle Paths in and Near City

With the arrival of spring one finds the bridle paths of Rock Creek Park, Potomac Park and in nearby Virginia, filled with enthusiastic riders from early morning until sunset. Many go for the sheer joy of the sport and to get into the country away from the hustle and bustle of the city traffic and others to put their mounts through the paces in preparation for the coming horse show, which takes place next month at Bradley Farms, Md., and the many other shows in Maryland and Virginia.

The followers and lovers of horses, the king of animal kingdom, have many types of events to look forward to besides the horse shows, for there are the races at Bowie and other tracks, only a short distance from Washington, then the point-to-point races such as the Maryland Gold Cup, at Worthington, Md., and the Virginia Gold Cup, at Warrenton, Va., and for those who wish to remain in Washington, they may witness the polo games at the Potomac Field three times a week during the month of May between the War Department teams and those from Fort Myer, which are played with tremendous skill and lightning speed, affording the spectators with many thrills.

Among those who have been recently seen on the bridle paths, smartly attired, are Miss Katherine Pearson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pearson, who make their home on Wyoming avenue, in a black coat of smooth tweed, whip cord breeches of the well-known "Army pink," a white shirt with a smart four-in-hand tie of yellow with a horse's head and horse shoe, in brown and orange, and to complete her costume she wears black boots. Miss Pearson, who is a frequent rider at Fort Myer and Fort Belvoir, Va., comes from a riding family, and is often seen with her two younger sisters, Edith and Gertrude, who are also fond of the saddle.

Mr. and Mrs. William Cassel Hanson have already won a number of ribbons with their fine hunters and are looking forward to winning many more during the coming events, to place in their "tack room." Mrs. Hanson was seen wearing a melton hunting coat of oxford gray, with blue and buff collar, colors of the Riding and Hunt Club, tan cavalry twill breeches and black hunting boots. With this she wore a canary-colored vest with brass buttons, a white stock caught with a handsome crystal horse pin and a black derby hat. Mrs. Hanson was snapped while holding her young hunter, Smokey Belle, while Mr. Hanson was holding Wanahon, a winner of blue ribbons in many of the leading classes at the recent hunter trials at Meadowbrook, in which Smokey Belle and their other horses were entered. Mr. Hanson often wears a Scotch worsted brown and tan checked coat, well-cut red brown breeches and brown boots, and a red tie. Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, wife of the former Secretary of State, presented the Riding and Hunt Club Trophy to Mr. Hanson, whose battalion won top honors in the club trials at the Meadowbrook Stables recently.

Miss Barbara Bonnycastle daughter of Col. and Mrs. Henry C. Bonnycastle, who is a typical Army daughter, having learned how to ride almost as soon as she walked, is frequently seen on the bridle paths around the Capital and has also ridden in the Society Circus, at Fort Myer, several times. Her favorite outfit is a black broadcloth coat, fawn-colored cavalry twill breeches, black boots, a white shirt with a yellow and orange tie, and, to complete, her costume, she always wears a black derby hat and white string gloves.

Spring Blouse Section Offers Wide Variety

Sporty Waists Available in Pastels or Bright Hues; Plaids Popular.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SPRING SHOPPING has a merrier aspect than ever with the opening of the blouse section in a downtown store. Here for $1 or $1.95 you can select that important addition to your wardrobe in any style, any color, and almost any material.

You should see the "Taffedettes" as they're called. Brighter than a flower bed in full bloom! There are polka dots, plaids, and plain colors ranging from soft conservative pastels to dizzy combinations of red, blue, green and yellow. And the price—$1.

In the same dollar category come the plainer, sportier blouses made from sturdy shirting in small almost invisible checks, or more dashing plaids. These are mainly light blue, green and gray.

And the crepes—you must see them and own one to appreciate both their ornamental and practical value. They take to the washtub like a duck to water and don't have to be pressed. These come in a variety of colors and in white also.

Among the dapper $1.95 blouses are some handkerchief linens, truly irresistible. They come in the loveliest shades imaginable, blue, aqua, pink, yellow, navy, brown and green.

Some flowered linens will do their share toward brightening a dark ensemble. These are so vivid they're almost gypsy-like.

And then the organdies, in all colors, and also in stripes and checks. The seersuckers are proving popular beyond belief. Evidently shoppers know a seersucker blouse is a dependable friend the whole season through.

It's the organdy-seersuckers that have taken the store by storm. They're light, dainty, utterly feminine, and practical to the nth degree.

You may not be blouse conscious now, but you will be after one visit to this new section!

Lipstick Personality.

It isn't often that a lipstick has personality, but this one seems to. You take one look at it and you'll be bound to laugh, or if you're in an especially sour mood you might just grin.

At any rate it looks more or less like any other lipstick until you notice the top. This is rounded off and painted like a comic face, a face with a Harpo Marx-ish expression.

The lipstick itself is undoubtedly one of the finest anywhere and particularly good now when so many women are complaining of dry and chapped lips. It's soft and creamy and very soothing. You'll find it indelible, too. It comes in four lovely shades and cases colored green and white and black and red.

Bargains in Slips.

There's no restraining the budget, or controlling your bargain buying instinct if you stop by an F street store where there's a slip sale going full blast. Such bargains! Such buys! Ten styles of French crepe slips, formerly $1.98 are selling for $1.55. All of them have shadow panels, some are tailored with double yoke or satin applique and embroidery, others are lacey, both top and bottom, with lovely lace vestees.

Three dollar slips, pure silk crepes and satins are going fast for $2.55. These are in two-seam and four-seam bias styles, tearose and white, sizes 32 to 44.

Gorgeous tea rose slips, every inch hand sown, represent a saving of $1.45. They are reduced from $5 to $3.55. Some of these are handembroidered and with hand drawn work, others are richly trimmed with imported laces.

Aids on Nuisance.

Packing up the winter things is a nuisance. There's no getting around that. But it's much less of a nuisance if you have some good, strong, moth repellent boxes to use.

You'll find these convenient boxes, really little cardboard chests, in the notions department of a downtown store. They're about 2 feet wide and 4 or 5 feet long, amply large, you see, to hold coats or blankets galore.

They range in price from 59 cents to $2.19.

Call Ruth Anne Davis, of The Washington Post, National 4200, Extension 305, for further information, or write, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope.

Pagan Spring.

SPRING'S RHYTHM echoes in the white brook's fall
As beauty comes to bind her April vows,
The hill reverberates with lusty call,
And thrushes carol in the flowering bows.
The insects quicken on the fields of birth,
And grasses lean along the fragrant lane,
That echoes to the reedy flutes of mirth,
In jocund patter of the silver rain.

And morning runs like lovely Grecian girls,
With blossom tangled in their flowing hair,
That streams upon the wind in golden swirls
As bright as daffodils in meadow flare.

And days are sensuous as old pagans were,
When first they heard Pan's nimble hoofbeats stir.

The Fishpools of Heshbon.

THE FISHPOOLS of Heshbon
Are beautiful to me.
A dream makes intercession
Continually.
The waters of Heshbon
Are gloomy and deep.
Stillness folds its lily-pad
And spotted fishes leap.

And all day long the weeping
Is like a fall of rain—
Woen for their fisherfolk
Who will not come again.

So still, so still, with held breath
The golden bass dart;
Wider and wider a circle
Swells from the pierced heart.

Birds of Dreams.

SOMEWHERE A gabled house, a shadowed lane,
The hush of evening and a calling bird,
A dim-lit window and, beyond the pane,
A mother's face, a cry, a golden word.

Too well I know that it is but somewhere
The mothers waits, the lamp is soft a-gleam;
The gabled house is wrought of ghostly air,
The shadowed path is but a drifting dream.

A distance not of miles nor yet of years
There lies between me and that golden word,
But ah!—somewhere a home, a mist of tears,
A hush of evening and a calling bird.

Invective Unreasonable.

A CLANGOROUS MOON rode up the gentle night
Spilling her unearned opulence pompously;—
Who says the moon is silver? Brass was she,
Flooding with brazen sheen the wearied sight;
Veiling the infinite, mysterious height;
Muting the high stars' delicate symphony;
Leaving us naught to feel, to hear to see—
Save her bacchanalian self, (once our delight!)

Today she crossed between us and the sun,
Passing confessed before his fiery face,—
All rayless, stark; not an authentic grace
From inner fire; I thought of the eye of one
Who is unlit within (as we do know)
Beside the flaming orb whence comes his show.

D. SANIAL GILL.

"This is something a bit different about the moon (with apologies to Keats)," writes D. Sanial Gill from her home in Dade City, Fla. The poem was first published in Driftwind. Mrs. Gill is the author of two volumes of verse.

Love's Way.

YOU WERE SO arragant, you would not plead,
And I, rebelliously, refused to yield
The largess your eyes craved. We both had need
Of understanding. Stubbornly we steeled
Our hearts against the swift impulse to say
Love's age-old litany—I love you, dear—
Until you coldly turned and went away
And I have waited you year after year.

Today I gathered every crimson rose
To fill thin crystal bowls—love's radiant hue—
Your message read: "Before the day shall close
I will have come, a supplicant, to you"
Dear God, let him not speak of years apart
But hold my trembling hands against his heart.

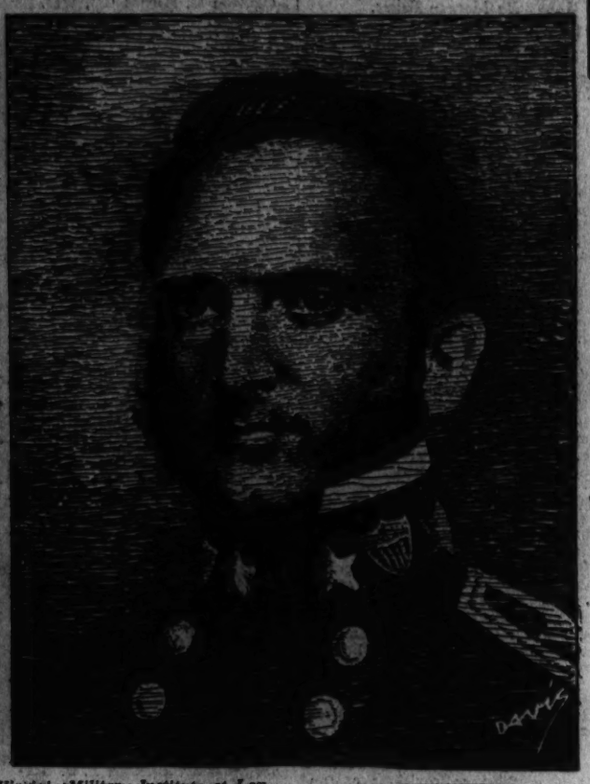
Half-Forgotten Romances of American History

Stonewall Jackson—Eleanor Junkin.



When a young instructor at the Virginia Military Institute at Lexington, Va., Stonewall Jackson met Eleanor Junkin, daughter of the president of Lexington College. Jackson was an impetuous suitor and the two were married shortly afterward. The death of his bride a few months later was a blow from which the military leader never entirely recovered.

Soldier Fell In Love With Educator's Daughter At First Sight.

By Elisabeth Ellicott Poe.

TWO NAMES are linked in deathless glory in the story of the Confederacy, those of Robert Edward Lee and Thomas Jonathan (Stonewall) Jackson. Other heroes served the lost cause with a devotion that was the admiration even of their foes, but these two are set apart as among the greatest military geniuses this country has produced.

Somehow the mental picture has grown up that Jackson, at the time of his death was an old man. This, of course, was not so. He was only 39 years old when he died.

Brave, high minded and of dauntless spirit, he led his men with such daring and military sagacity that the expression "standing like a stone wall" led to his nickname.

Thomas Jonathan Jackson sprang from a family noted for its piety, industry and achievement. Lawyers had appeared in it from time to time and Stonewall Jackson in his younger days must have thought of following in the legal footsteps of his father, a competent lawyer of Clarksburg, West Virginia, where the lad was born in 1824.

Thomas was only three years old when his father died and he grew up in what might be called an atmosphere of "gentle poverty." His mother had no help in her farming except what come from the ready hands of her children.

Mother Married Again.

After a time she married again, Capt. Blake B. Woodson, another lawyer of Clarksburg. But her health began to fail and Thomas was sent to his grandmother, Mrs. Jonathan Jackson, in Lewis County. It is said that when he learned he was to be separated from his mother he hid in the woods and was found sobbing late at night. Although he did not know it when he was taken away, it was a long farewell to her. When he returned some months later, she was on her death bed.

When he was 12 years old, death struck again at his happiness in the loss of his grandmother. Other relatives cared for him and when he was 16 an uncle appointed him constable.

His thoughts now were on West Point and a military career. In 1842 he entered the academy and among his classmates were future leaders on both sides in the Civil War, Generals George B. McClellan, Foster, Remo, Stoneman, Couch and Gibbons, of the Federal, and Generals A. P. Hill, George Pickett, Maury, D. R. Jones, W. D. Smith and Wilcox, of the Confederate forces.

Meantime, at Lexington College, afterwards known as Washington and Lee University, its president, the Rev. George Junkin, D. D., had a charming daughter, Eleanor, the toast of the college and of the Military Institute nearby.

Thomas Jackson had no thought or knowledge of her when he was graduated from West Point and served with distinction in the war with Mexico, coming out of the conflict a major. After a tour of duty at Governors Island, New York, he accepted a call to be instructor at the Virginia Military Institute in Lexington.

Course of Life Changes.

He met Eleanor Junkin and the whole course of his life was changed. The following description by a contemporary best describes the girl who was to become Jackson's bride:

"Eleanor had more pretensions to beauty than some of her sisters and was of a merrier, more social disposition. Her religious faith, having the simplicity of a trustful child, made her one of the sunniest, happiest of beings. This brightness of temper, and a calm, clear judgment, Eleanor inherited from her lovely mother."

It soon became noticeable that Eleanor was interested in the new professor. And Jackson was in love for the first time in his life. As a wooer he was impetuous and his suit prospered. Only Eleanor's parents were told of the romance and in August, 1853, the couple was married quietly. Writing to his sister about his new bride, Jackson declared:

"To me my wife is a great source of happiness."

They had a few short months of joy together before Eleanor died. As Jackson knelt beside her bed all hope seemed to pass from him, and his friends were alarmed for a time on account of his overwhelming grief.

We have testimony to this effect from a contemporary, who said: "His grief was so great that we had no ways and means with which to assuage it. Yet even then he was most anxious not to sin by questioning in his heart the wisdom and rectitude of God's dealings with him. For a long time his taste for secular occupation and pleasures was lost and his only aspirations pointed to the other world."

General Famed for Piety.

In this regard, it is interesting to quote the testimony of a gallant Confederate officer, who went to Richmond to see Gen. Jackson at the height of his fame. He found the general in a tiny hall bedroom, furnished simply with a bed and single chair. But on a small table was the one book, the Bible, from which Stonewall Jackson drew the inspiration for his way of life.

His piety was famed in military legend and it is said that he ever prayed long before a battle when his troops were to go forward in a charge.

Thus he came to a calmer view of the death of his wife and once said: "My dear Ellie has now gone on a glorious visit, though through a gloomy portal. Her companions are of the Glorified Host. I look forward with delight to the day when I shall join her."

Before that time, however, he was to meet and care for another woman Mary Anna Morrison, daughter of Dr. E. R. R. Morrison, of Mecklenburg County, N. C. They were married in 1857 and their few years together before he was killed at Chancellorsville were passed in peace and happiness.

They Were Married a Few Months When Bride Was Fatally Stricken.

What TODAY Means

"Aries"

IF APRIL 8 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:30 to 11:30 a. m., from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m., and from 6:30 to 8:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m., from 3:30 to 5:30 p. m., and from 8:30 to 10:30 p. m.

It will pay you to be observant on this date. Your brain is very elastic, and capable of absorbing a tremendous amount of useful knowledge. The wisdom gained may save you from a financial loss later, or the making of a serious mistake in a business matter. The wise business man will avoid brusqueness, or rudeness, in or out of his office on this date, for there is no telling how far reaching the unfavorable reaction may be.

If a woman and April 8 is your birthday, you will avoid many an argument if you force yourself to make a habit of not being too insistent in having your own way. It is a mistake to be always ready to enter into a controversy, especially where trivial matters are involved, for it is wearing on both yourself and those forced to participate in such discussions. Generous and charitable, lovable as well as magnetic, you have it within your own power to achieve success in both a social and a business way.

Tea room or restaurant management, after the right preparatory training, trained nursing, secretarial work, as well as interior decorating, or selling specialized lines of merchandise, should give you the opportunity to demonstrate your ability. Married life should be advisable.

If a man and April 8 is your natal day, avoid carrying a chip on your shoulder, and allow other people to express their opinion, without displaying impatience, and your road to success should be easy.

This Recipe for Sea Food Calls For Grated Cheese, White Wine

Blend of Flounder, Shrimps and Oysters Makes a Dish of Surpassing Excellence to Serve During Lenten Season.

By Dorothea Duncan.

DON'T FORGET to include at least one sea food au gratin dish among your Lenten menus. Those who enjoy a variety of sea foods will like this one that blends three common favorites into a dish of surpassing excellence. The hint of cheese in its make-up is a contrasting note, and the flavoring of white wine gives it a touch of the unusual. Here is the recipe:

Sea Food au Gratin.

1 pound filet of flounder
½ pound of shrimps, cooked, cleaned and shelled
½ pound of small oysters, simmered
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup water
½ cup grated cheese
1 cup white wine
2 cups chopped spinach, buttered and seasoned
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter

Simmer filet in salted water to which ½ cup of white wine has been added. Place cooked, buttered and seasoned spinach in center of a greased baking platter. Arrange filet on top, oysters and shrimps around spinach, and pour over sauce made as follows: Blend flour and butter, then add stock in which filet was cooked. When smooth add remaining wine and cook slowly until slightly thickened. Season with pepper. Sprinkle with grated cheese. Decorate with cooked shrimps around edge. Bake in a moderate oven until cheese is golden brown. This will serve four.

The suggested dinner menu has been planned around the sea food au gratin dish.

Dinner Menu.

Tomato juice cocktail
Sea food au gratin
Baked potatoes
Buttered summer squash
Bread and butter
Cottage pudding with lemon sauce
Tea Milk (for children)

Baked potatoes are a favorite if they are not soggy, so remember the few important details about baking and serving them. First of all scrub the potatoes well for many enjoy eating the skins. Remove any blemishes. Bake in a very hot oven (450-500 degrees F.) and bake until tender (30-60 minutes). Be sure to have the oven hot before the potatoes are put in. To test the potatoes, do not pierce them with a fork, but squeeze them with the hand wrapped in a towel. When soft, slash the top in the form of a cross and press slightly on each side of the cut. This will allow the steam to escape and keep the potato from becoming soggy. A big piece of butter may be inserted in the cut. A baked pototo is at its best when served straight from the oven.

Cottage Pudding.

1½ cups flour
3 teaspoos baking powder
½ cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup milk
1 egg
¼ cup shortening

Sift flour once and measure, mix with baking powder and sift agatin. Cream the shortening and add the sugar, creaming well after each addition. Add salt and well-beaten egg. Then add the flour and the milk alternately, beating after each addition. Pour into a greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 35 to 45 minutes. Serve with following sauce.

Lemon Sauce.

½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Nutmeg
Salt
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup boiling water

Mix the sugar and cornstarch, add the boiling water and a pinch of salt and boil until thick and clear. Continue cooking over hot water 20 minutes. Beat in butter, the lemon juice and nutmeg. A grating of lemon rind may be added.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I would like to say a few words to the unhappy mother who wrote you April 2 and signed her letter "Grieved." My mother and I read her letter together and both of us were astonished at the lack of understanding so evidently existing between that mother and her daughter.

* * * *

My mother has been very different in her treatment of me—her only child. I am 19 years old, two years older than the daughter mentioned in your column. For five years my mother has encouraged my companionship with girls and boys my own age, permitting them to come to our home.

* * * *

Of course, when I was still in high school my studies had to be taken into consideration and I knew that wherever I went I had to be home in time to get plenty of sleep. In my opinion, if a girl is in a mixed crowd often, she regards boys more as friends and less as the object of romantic dreams.

* * * *

HAD "Grieved's" daughter known her mother would not object, she would not have failed to ask permission to go out with her friends the night in question. It is my mother's opinion that when a girl deceives her mother in seeking to do something she has no right to do, the daughter is disobedient; but if she goes against her mother's wishes to do something she has a perfect right to do, there is something seriously wrong in the relationship between mother and daughter—and usually the mother's fault.

* * * *

"Grieved," you may not respect a young person's opinion, but I believe, in all fairness to your daughter, it is my duty as one of her fellow members in the vast army of often misunderstood youth to try to help you understand her reasoning.

* * * *

Above all, "Grieved," do not consider your daughter's conduct "cheap." It wasn't cheap. In your own heart, you can't really think so. Don't widen the already dangerous chasm between yourself and your daughter by such a punishment as denying your daughter any nights out with her friends until school closes.

* * * *

TRY to become better acquainted with your children, and gain their trust and confidence. Let them know you trust them and they will go their way keeping themselves worthy of your confidence.

DAUGHTER.

Reasoning Is Sound.

DEAR DAUGHTER: I am sure "Grieved" will appreciate the spirit of sympathy and helpfulness which dictated the writing of your letter. I believe with you her daughter's conduct in slipping away to join her friends on pretext of going to a show with her brother was essentially innocent and indicative of a desire for youthful fun, rather than of a tendency to sneak and lie. I agree, too, her mother will be showing greater wisdom in encouraging her daughter to have and enjoy the friendship of both boys and girls, than she would in further curtailing her social activities as punishment for her transparent deception.

How To KEEP WELL

Lead Poisoning.

MANY years ago Thomas Cadwalader, of Philadelphia, wrote an essay on a peculiar disease characterized by severe abdominal cramps. He entitled his work, "An Essay on the West India Dry Gripes With the Method of Preventing and Curing That Cruel Distemper." It was published by Benjamin Franklin in Philadelphia in 1745, and is one of the rare Franklin imprints.

It appears that the symptoms (dry gripes) were the result of poisoning from drinking Jamaica rum which had been distilled through lead pipes. In England this same condition was known as Devonshire colic and arose largely through the use of lead equipment in the manufacture of cidar. In France it was called chelica pictonum, and occurred from the absorption of the fumes of white lead. Many of the cases cited by Cadwalader could be included in the textbooks of today with but little change. He clearly described the paralysis, the wrist drop, and the ankle drop that some times follow chronic lead poisoning.

Practically all forms of lead are poisonous. While acute poisoning is not at all infrequent, chronic poisoning from slow absorption of small quantities of the metal is common. Whether it is introduced into the system by contamination of the hands, by inhalation, or through food or drink makes very little difference. Lead colic occurs with fair frequency in painters who mix and use white lead.

Lead absorbed into the body affects chiefly the muscles, certain nerves, the liver, and the kidneys. An early sign is marked pallor of the mucous membranes. A blue line along the margins of the gums at the base of the teeth is often present. Should this phenomenon be noted lead poisoning must be thought of. The patient usually complains of loss of appetite, nausea, a metallic taste in the mouth, and foul breath. There is sometimes a marked destruction of the red cells of the blood, and jaundice is not uncommon.

Abdominal cramps are severe and sometimes it is difficult to differentiate lead colic from other abdominal conditions causing severe pain. Obstinate constipation is the rule. After a few days the attack subsides, leaving the patient depressed and weak. If exposure to lead continues the attacks will return.

The possibility of lead poisoning should always be considered in persons who are ill and who have had any contact whatever with lead or one of its compounds. If this disease is discovered the process of ridding the body of lead—"deleading"—must be accomplished slowly, for if stored amounts of lead are suddenly liberated into the circulation an acute attack of lead poisoning may follow. Frequent doses of magnesium sulphate (epsom salts) will relieve the colic and change to an insoluble form that portion of the metal present in the intestinal tract. In order to neutralize the acute effects of lead circulating in the blood it is wise to place the patient on an alkaline diet, rich in milk, calcium, green vegetables, and fruits. This will have the effect of driving the lead into the long bones and relieving the acute symptoms. Afterward, perhaps some weeks, the entire progam should be changed, acids replacing alkalis in the diet.

Patriotic Group Plans Sessions Here This Week

Annual Banquet and General Court Is Set for Wednesday, Thursday.

THE NATIONAL SOCIETY, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, will hold its annual banquet and general court Wednesday and Thursday at the Washington Hotel, Pennsylvania avenue and Fifteenth street northwest.

The credentials committee will be in session for the registration of members from 6.30 to 7:30 o'clock Wednesday and at 9 o'clock before the opening of the general court Thursday morning. Mrs. James Charles Peabody is chairman of the committee. All members are requested to register on Wednesday, before the banquet, if possible.

The national executive board, composed of national officers, national councilors, presidents and vice presidents of chapters, will meet at 10 o'clock Wednesday at its headquarters, 1828 I street northwest.

All delegates will attend the annual banquet at 7:30 o'clock the opening day in the Rose Room of the hotel. Mrs. James Henry Harper is in charge of the arrangements.

There will be three sessions of the general court on Thursday, at 10 o'clock, 2 o'clock and 8 o'clock.

Officers of the society include Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones, president; Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., vice president; Mrs. Graham Lawrence, chaplain; Mrs. Grace L. H. Broseau, recording secretary; Mrs. Llewellyn N. Edwards, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Stanley Lyman Otis, organizing secretary; Mrs. James J. Gilligan, registrar; Mrs. Harriet Vaughn Rigdon, treasurer, Mrs. Ralph van Landingham, historian, and Mrs. Thomas C. Mell, color bearer.

The regular meeting of the Constitution Chapter, D. A. R., which is scheduled to be held April 16 has been postponed until April 22, on account of conflicting with the National D. A. R. convention.

The luncheon to be given in honor of Mrs. Thomas Hardie Seay, regent of Constitution Chapter, will be held April 16 at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Alfred L. Talbot will be in charge of the arrangements.

The Washington Alumnae of Delta Gamma will hold its April meeting at 8 p. m. tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Thomas Kirby, 109 Grafton street, Chevy Chase. The assistant hostesses will be Mrs. Richard Tatlow, Mrs. George Myers, Mrs. Clarence Elder, and Mrs. J. A. Elmore. Members who can not attend are requested to call Mrs. Kirby.

Homer Rodeheaver, song leader and writer, formerly connected with the Billy Sunday services, will present a program of songs at the meeting of the Business Women's Council at 6:45 o'clock tomorrow in the chapel. Dr. L. W. Glazebrook will be the guest speaker.

A Novelty in Handbags.

A novel feature of a new calfskin handbag is a strap handle so wide it carries the owner's initials.

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

Harassed radio listener tumbled into the office yesterday and sputtered, "Say! Just what is the lowdown on WJSV? Why, I was listening in and what do I hear but 'This is Station WJSV, Alexahndriah, Virginia—Heah, Heah!' and another time '—Across the Potomac from Washington—so what?' Have they all gone nuts?"

Radio listeners should remember that WJSV is trying hard to be funny; that the announcers, long used to dignified utterances may feel a little timid at being funny every station break. However, as we remember, the "Man in the Street" wants them funny—so that's that.

Today the Music Festival at the Library of Congress opens and we'll hear the famous Kolisch String Quartet of Vienna on WMAL, 11:15 p. m. The program: Alban Berg's "Lyrisches Suite," Bela Bartok's Fifth String Quartet, and Beethoven's Quartet in B flat and his Grand Fugue, Opus 133.

Tomorrow the Gordon String Quartet will present a program of works by American composers. Details will appear in this column.

A few local notes: WJSV starts a new program at 10:30 a. m. today when a yodeler, Slim Stone, gives you a bit of mountain music. This program will be heard again Friday.

At 1:40 p. m., Union Station, the Washington Senators will return, accompanied by N. B. C.'s Bill Coyle. You'll hear, on WMAL, a word or two from each player and comments and welcomes from Bill himself.

The radio horizon, from the Children's program angle, is becoming brighter. April 10 introduces Skipper Jim and his Log Book, a clean, fine, exciting spot of adventure calculated to appeal to refined youngsters and discriminating parents.

Speeches:

Secrtary Wallace on the Farm and Home Hour, WMAL, 12:30 p. m. The program celebrates the 2,000th performance.

Opening session of the American Red Cross convention brings several speakers to the mike, among them Admiral Cary Grayson, newly appointed chairman. On WRC, 10:45 p. m.

Representative Sumners, WRC, 4:30 p. m., speaks on "Public Responsibility for Crime Control."

Two best dramatic offerings: Ibsen's "Wild Duck," on WMAL at 3 p. m., and a lighter bit, "Love's Press Agent," on WMAL, 9:30 p. m.

Here and there:

Clark Gable tells you his idea of contentment on WRC, 10 p. m.

Gladys Swarthout is featured on WRC, 8:30 p. m.

James Melton appears in "Music at the Haydn's" in a new role introduced on WRC, 9:30 p. m.

WJSV best bets: Kate Smith's talent hunt revue at 8:30 p. m.

Lucrezia Bori with Kostelanetz, 9 p. m.

The Big Show, with Gertrude Niedden, Lud Gluskin and Block and Sully.

Another episode of Dark-K-nights, 5:15.

The April meeting of the Washington section of the Institute of Radio Engineers will be held today in the auditorium of the Potomac Electric Power Co. At 8 p. m. an illustrated paper on "Recent Developments in Cathode Ray Oscillographs" will be presented by W. G. Diehl, of R. C. A. Newer apparatus may be exhibited.

Stake-Drawing Tonight For Bird Dog Trials

Stakes for the annual bird dog field trials of the National Capital Field Trial Club will be drawn tonight at the Dixie Tavern, Rockville, Md. A members' dinner will precede the club meeting.

The trials are set for tomorrow and Wednesday on the farm of William Hill, at Glen near Potomac, Md. Quail will be released for point work by the dogs. Ernest Mead, of Richmond, and Claude B. Stickley, of Vaucluse, Va., are to judge the three stakes, consisting of puppy, novice shooting dog and all age trials.

The Federal Diary

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

WITH the interest created throughout Government service by the announcement of the Civil Service Commission's new efficiency rating plan, attention will center strongly this week on the resumed Sirovich bill hearings, which reopen Wednesday. The hearing will continue through Thursday and Friday.

BAKER.

It is expected that Dr. L. J. O'Rourke, chief of Research Division, Civil Service Commission, who devised the new system of ratings, will testify during the course of the hearings, which will more or less lead to a show-down on the relative merits of his plan and of the automatic promotions system provided by the Sirovich bill itself.

E. Claude Babcock, president, American Federation of Government Employes, has made it clear he does not regard the new system of the commission as satisfactory. However, he admits it marks an advance over the one now in effect. Mr. Babcock's organization has strongly indorsed the Sirovich bill and will stand firm, he has stated, for the principles embodied in that measure.

The new efficiency rating plan was studied carefully over the week-end, and it is expected there will be further comments on its practicability and desirability as personnel officers and others interested digest the provisions of the plan and draw their conclusions from it.

There probably will be serious objection to the provision for arbitrary dismissal of employes, and it will probably be contended in some quarters that the arrangements for promotion under it are not sufficiently liberal.

FIVE Government employes have just obtained patents on various inventions ranging from a bale tag to a machine gun device, as follows:

Frank G. Manson (F), War, for an aviator's helmet, having specially designed chin straps which permit free movement of the jaw.

George E. Gaus (P), Agriculture, two patents, one of an identification tag for cotton bales which may be inserted into the bale as it is being baled and can not be removed after the baling operation is completed; the other is for a flagstaff holder which permits the staff to be "rocked" out of engagement with the holder, yet will prevent the staff from becoming accidentally loosened.

Gladeon M. Barnes (C), War, for a muzzle brake for guns, comprising a container to receive and hold the explosion gases temporarily.

James C. Karnes (F), War, for an optical system whereby stereoscopic vision in two planes may be secured.

Clarence E. Simpson (P), War, for a machine gun structure.

Two Offices Moving.

Legal Division of the Land Program, FERA, with about 75 employes, expects to be settled in new quarters in the Ouray Building by April 15. The division is now in Tempo No. 2, at D and Nineteenth streets northwest.

Space in the Ouray Building will be made available by the American Federation of Government Employes which is moving its national headquarters to the seventh floor of the Washington Loan & Trust Building at Ninth and F streets. The District department of the federation also expects to have offices in the same building.

COAST and Geodetic Survey Golf Association will open its spring tournament Thursday on the East Potomac with 32 entrants, according to Frank G. Erskine, president. David Hight is the defending champion. H. G. Dorsey, crowned Coast Survey champion at the close of last season, also is entered for this event.

At the recent election, the association officers, besides Mr. Erskine, were named as follows:

R. M. Bush (P) secretary; H. C. Allen, treasurer; Tournament committee—Mr. Bush, chairman; H. G. Dorsey and L. W. Kines; Board of governors—Mr. Erskine, F. S. Borden and J. R. Fitzgerald.

Col. William P. Upshur, Lieut. Col. A. D. Dorex, Maj. Leo Hermle and Chief Q. M. Clerk Robert M. O'Toole, Marine Corps Headquarters, are spending the week at Marine Barracks, Parris Island, inspecting corps activties.

Committee Approves.

With the spring membership drive of the local unions of the National Federation of Federal Employes in full swing, Miss Matilda Lindsay, campaign chairman, announces the first committee to be organized. The officers of the D. C. Federation of Federal Employes constitute a general committee for the drive and direct the community and department meetings, social gatherings and other get-togethers of the campaign. The D. C. Federation offers the grand prize of a trip to the national N. F. F. E. convention at Yellowstone Park this summer to the member recruiting the greatest number before July 1. Individual unions and branches are to provide other individual and group awards.

John W. Glinder, president of the District of Columbia Federation, N. F. F. E., has approved the following committees:

Publicity: Charles R. Kothe, Adjutant General's Office Union, No. 372; Dr. J. Franklin Meyer, Bureau of Standards Union, No. 250; Louis R. Neilinger, Justice Department, colored Federal Employes Union, No. 71; William B. Whipple, Internal Revenue Bureau; Treasury Union, No. 262; and Dr. Herbert Smith, Forest Service, Agriculture Department Branch of Local No. 2.

Entertainment, Miss Ollie Greer, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Women's Union, No. 105, chairman; Mrs. Sue H. Inge, Treasury Department Union, No. 261; W. E. Hoffheins, War Department Union, No. 261; Miss Maude Miller, Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Women's Union, No. 105; William Sanger, Department of Commerce Branch of Local No. 2; Elmer Thompson, Department of Agriculture Branch of Local, No. 2; W. F. Kesmodel, Navy Yard Union, No. 250; Charles Kothe, Adjutant General's Office Union, No. 372, and Mrs. Maude Jones, Agriculture Department, colored Federal Employes Union, No. 71.

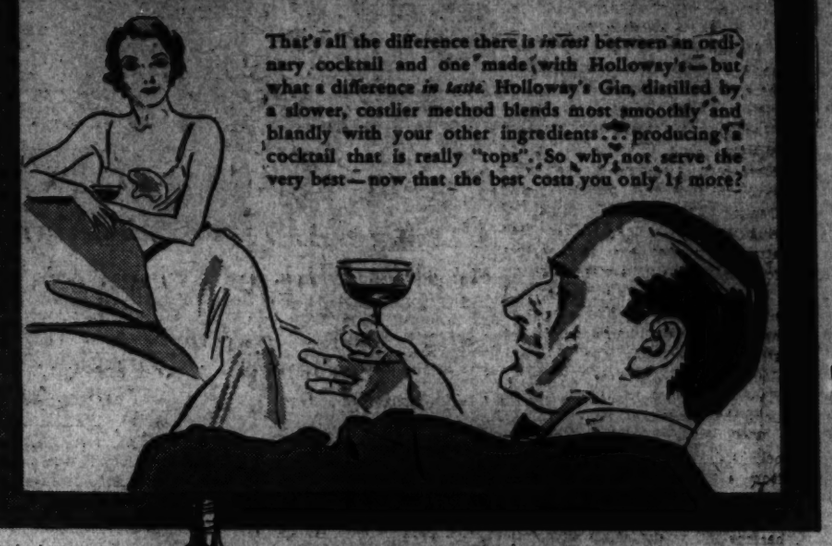
Do you know...
It costs less than 1¢* to hear a guest say—
"This is the best Martini I've ever tasted"

*One cent is all the difference in cost per cocktail between Holloway's Gin and the very cheapest gin. Compared with average-priced gins, the difference is even less.



That's all the difference there is to cost between an ordinary cocktail and one made with Holloway's—but what a difference in taste. Holloway's Gin, distilled by a slower, costlier method blends most smoothly and blandly with your other ingredients... producing a cocktail that is really "tops". So why not serve the very best—now that the best costs you only 1¢ more?

P. S.—The incomparable, pungent tart-sweet flavor of Holloway's Sloe Gin has made it by far the most popular.

ASK THESE 4 QUESTIONS WHEN YOU "LOOK AT ALL THREE"

1 Has it genuine Hydraulic Brakes?
2 Has it a Safety Steel Body?
3 Has it Modern Redistribution of Weight?
4 Has it Six Cylinder Gasoline and Oil Economy?

OIL GOES FARTHER... lubricates better. You use less fuel, too. New cooling and ignition reduce Plymouth's consumption of gas and oil 12% to 20%! Such savings count up in a year.

(Below) THAT'S STEEL reinforced with steel. Plymouth's body is all-steel, throughout... center posts, doors, window frames... all of it. Bolted solidly to the frame in 46 (instead of 16) places.

Plymouth has all this Extra Value... yet it's one of the Lowest-Priced Cars!

THIS IS THE WAY to buy a low-priced car... if you're going to stay happy with your choice.

Look at "All Three" leading low-priced cars. Ride in them... drive them... and ask these four questions.

Ask about brakes. Plymouth is the only one of "All Three" with genuine hydraulic brakes. They stop you smoothly ... they're the safest brakes made.

Body construction? Plymouth's body is all-steel throughout... steel reinforced with steel. These safeguards make the Plymouth the safest low-priced car.

Plymouth's Floating Ride will tell its own story. Weight is distributed on the principle introduced by the famous "Airflow" cars... seats and engine moved forward. The back seat rides like the front... no bumps or bouncing.

Plymouth is so big and fast... has such thrilling acceleration and power... you might think it costs a lot to run.

But new cooling and ignition actually reduce gas and oil consumption by 12% to 20%! Plymouth is today the world's most economical full-size car!

Son Identifies Man Afflicted With Amnesia

Father, Lost 2 Months, Tells of Being Slugged and Robbed.

Held Prisoner in Cabin, He Says; Suffers Skull Fracture.

By the Associated Press.

Staunton, Va., April 7.—Staunton's mystery man was identified here today by Herman Woodson, of Nelson County, as his father, Wheeler J. Woodson, who has been missing since February 7. The older man, his mind blurred by a skull fracture, told his family and Deputy Sheriff J. F. Long, of Augusta County, that he had been attacked, robbed and held captive for two months by a masked gang.

Accompanied by his mother and sister, the younger Woodson came here today and interviewed the gaunt stranger in the Augusta County Jail. Following the interview he declared to Deputy Sheriff Long that "that man is my father."

Woodson, who Dr. Glen C. Campbell, jail physician, says is suffering from a heavy blow on the head with a possible fracture at the base of the skull, was unable to remember specific details of his imprisonment. He was held in a shack, he said, from the window of which he could see only "something like a coal pile."

Always Wore Masks, he Says.

Three men, always masked, guarded him he said and his meals were brought him by a woman "with a handkerchief tied over her face."

Woodson said that he was attacked by two men as he was on his way home after selling a load of tobacco in Lynchburg on February 7, "they beat me and robbed me," he said, and then took him to the "shack."

He was unable to recall, he said, where the shack was. Yesterday the men blindfolded him, put him in an automobile and drove a distance he is unable to estimate.

Pushed Out of Car.

Near Staunton, he said, they stopped the car and pushed him into the road. He removed the blindfold a few minutes later, but his captors had driven away. He began walking toward Staunton until he was found, exhausted and apparently suffering from amnesia, on the outskirts of the city. He was taken to the jail where he told Deputy Long that he "thought" he was Woodson.

Because of the bad weather, Woodson was left at the jail here tonight. Tomorrow his family plans to take him to University Hospital at Charlottesville.

At the time Woodson vanished his automobile was found with stains resembling human blood on it. Analysis proved the stains to be animal blood.

Apple Festival Plans Are Listed

War, Peace Motifs to Vie in Winchester Program.

By the Associated Press.

Winchester, Va., April 7.—Bristling bayonets and doves of peace are to compete for popularity in the "Trail of the Pink Petals," headliner of the second and concluding day of the Apple Blossom festival here this month, a parade in which "Queen Shenandoah XII" rides in State as reigning empress of a beautiful but fleeting dynasty.

The queen will be escorted and followed by a large number of veterans of the World War in full dress uniforms and by military companies, military school cadets and similar organizations in uniform.

The program under direction of W. O. McDaniel, director of the Winchester Collegiate Institute, will be divided into four sections. It will portray incidents in the history of Winchester and the Shenandoah Valley.

Hagerstown Considers A Purchasing Agency

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 7.—A central purchasing agency by the consolidation of all city departments will be considered at a meeting of the mayor and city council Wednesday night.

City officials hope by establishing such a department to effect large annual savings.

Virginia U. to Memorialize Thomas Jefferson Saturday

Academic Procession and Speech by Colby Starts Exercises Closing With Wreath Ritual at Founder's Tomb at Monticello.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 7.—The 192d anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson will be commemorated here Saturday in Founder's Day exercises at the University of Virginia with the placing of a wreath on Jefferson's tomb at Monticello by members of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation.

Bainbridge Colby, of New York, will address the students and the faculties on "The Jefferson Tradition and Woodrow Wilson."

The ceremonies will begin at 11 a. m., with the academic procession from the Rotunda to Cabell Hall, where the president, John Lloyd Newcomb, will present the speaker.

Following the exercises at the university, Mr. Colby will be the guest of honor at the memorial services at Monticello.

Mr. Colby was Secretary of State in the Cabinet of Woodrow Wilson and together the two engaged in the practice of law in New York for several years. President Wilson was a student in the University of Virginia's Law School from 1879 to 1881.

Jefferson, who created the university in his old age, was born April 13, 1743, at Shadwell, near here, and died at Monticello, July 4, 1826. Chartered in 1819, the university was opened for its first session a year before his death.

Recent Entries Presage Lively Spelling Contest

Eleven Counties Listed to Take Part in Post-Sponsored Bee.

Eleven counties have enough schools entered now in the National Spelling Bee to insure a lively county contest and The Washington Post, local sponsor of the project, is making arrangements for these matches.

Each contest will be held in the county seat, or other town easily accessible to the whole county.

Most of the county contests will be held on Friday or Saturday, May 3 and 4; although in special cases other dates are being arranged.

Field Kept Open.

Enrollment will be open to schools until the time of the county matches.

Eight schools enrolled Saturday. These are: Shenandoah County, Virginia.—St. Luke School, Woodstock, Anne R. Sanford, principal.

Loudoun County, Va.—Leesburg High School, Charles S. Monroe, principal; Pleasant Valley School, Miss Frances L. Cockerell; Woodburn School, Miss Mary R. Thomas.

Rappahannock County, Va.—Massanova School, Miss Mary B. Bruce.

Prince Georges County, Md. — Mount Rainier High School, F. P. Blunt.

St. Marys Entered.

St. Marys County, Md. — Great Mills Consolidated School, Miss Jane L. Mattingly.

Charles County, Md. — Pisgah School No. 3, District 2, Mrs. Esther Hanna Barley.

Word lists are being mailed today to principals who have enrolled their schools. Announcement of details of county matches will be announced as soon as they can be arranged.

All requests for information should be addressed to Alice Fox Pitts, spelling bee director, in care of The Washington Post.

Crisfield—Henry Griffin's fish are getting used to the alarming experience of having Griffin's cat drink from their fishbowl. Griffin reports his pet cat invariably quenches its thirst by drinking from the bowl. Now, Griffin says, his fish dive to the bottom of their glass house and "play dead" until the cat has departed.

Chestertown—Dr. William Mather Lewis, president of Lafayette College, has accepted an invitation to deliver the principal address at Washington College commencement exercises June 10. Announcement of Dr. Lewis' acceptance was made by Dr. Gilbert W. Meade, president of Washington College.

Annapolis—The Rev. James L. Smiley would like the good citizens of Annapolis to know that he is enjoying splendid health. Mr Smiley has come forward to denounce as imposters persons who allegedly have been soliciting funds to aid the Rev. Smiley who, they said, was "seriously ill." The clergyman said he was "greatly embarrassed" by the deception.

Hagerstown — Alleged to have beaten her daughter severely with a strap with a metal buckle, a 35-year-old mother is being held in jail here. At a hearing in juvenile court the mother refused to send her daughter to school, and Justice H. E. Snyder ordered the woman returned to jail.

Baltimore — Bessie George, a gypsy, is docketed for trial this week in criminal court on a charge of having obtained $1,976 from a Negro woman on pretense of curing the latter of an illness. The plaintiff charges the gypsy wrapped the money in a stocking and told her to keep it against her side for two days. At expiration of that period, the plaintiff claims, she examined the stocking and found it filled with worthless paper.

Elkton—Assurance of competition in Mayor Taylor W. McKinney's candidacy for re-election here has been given with announcement by Henry H. Mitchell that he will seek the post in the town election May 27. Mayor McKinney is asking a fifth term.

Dr. G. W. Mead Flays Maryland Teachers' Oath

It Would Work a Hardship on Schools, College President Says.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., April 7.—President Gilbert Wilcox Mead, of Washington College, today was added to the list of prominent Maryland educators opposing the teacher's oath measure now before Gov. Nice for signature.

The bill would require teachers in all State-aided institutions to take an oath of allegiance to the Constitution, and has brought a barrage of criticism from college and university presidents and professors throughout the State. It was passed by both houses of the Legislature. Delegate Johns S. White (Democrat), Prince Georges), sponsored the measure.

Pointing out that he had not read the bill, Dr. Mead said, however, that he felt "it would work a hardship on distinguished Maryland scholars who are not American citizens."

"One Johns Hopkins professor, for instance," he continued, "is a Frenchman, and internationally known as an authority on Franco-American cultural relations. He is, incidentally, an authority on Thomas Jefferson. In that case it is not fair to assume that he is not loyal to American principles and institutions simply because he is a foreigner.

"Besides, I think many persons do not properly define their terms when speaking of American and un-American principles. Some of them class Socialists and Communists together, for example, and all critics of American institutions as they now exist are not un-American and unpatriotic."

Dr. Mead said he felt, on general principles that the bill "is not a good thing" and may possibly tend to befog thoughts on the subject. He said he believed it might stifle constructive criticism of American social, economic and political affairs.

"It is the same thing," he said, "as existed in Pennsylvania at one time when all persons not subscribing to certain definite religious tenets were classed as atheists."

Social Work Heads Going to Richmond

Miss Lenroot to Speak on Children's Problems.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Richmond, Va., April 7.—Program for the thirty-fifth Virginia State conference of social work to be held in Richmond Wednesday through Saturday has been announced by R. F. Hough, of Salem, conference president.

The first day will be taken up with institutes, limited to 25 persons, dealing with family welfare, case analysis, child welfare, selected problems in children's institutions, treatment methods for delinquent children and other social questions.

General sessions will be held Thursday and Friday nights when Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, head of the United States Children's Bureau and president of the National Conference of Social Work, and George R. Bedinger, executive director, Public Charities Association of Pennsylvania, will speak. A business meeting wil be held Saturday morning.

Army Shifts Captain From Virginia Tech

Blacksburg, Va., April 7.—(AP).—Capt. Graham T. Schweickert, associate professor of military science and tactics and assistant commandant of cadets at Virginia Tech since 1928, was ordered to Hawaii by the War Department yesterday.

His transfer followed by one day that of Lieut. Col. Jorn B. Maynard, commandant of cadets since 1929. Lieut. Col. Maynard was also transferred to Hawaii. No official indication has been given as to the officers who will be assigned here to fill these vacancies.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tappahannock, Va., April 7.—The Essex County Board of Supervisors, meeting here, decided to let the county tax levy remain the same as last year. The board also decided to continue home demonstration work in the county and to adopt a budget for expenditures.

Police Scout Theft Theory In 2 Killings

Now Seek Motive Other Than Robbery in Coleman Deaths.

Debris to Be Removed Today in Effort to Find Shotgun.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., April 7.—Investigators working to find additinoal clews that will lead them to the perpetrators of the brutal murder of Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Coleman tonight sought another motive for the crime other than robbery.

In seeking another objective for which Mr. and Mrs. Coleman might have been put to death officers pointed out that nothing in the entire house with the exception of two small boxes on a bureau in Mrs. Coleman's bedroom had been disturbed. If robbery had been the motive, officers said it is likely that the place would have been ransacked.

Early tomorrow the well in which the aged couple were found last Wednesday morning will be cleaned out. When authorities first tried to clean out the 40-foot hole sides of the structure caved in. Tomorrow the fallen debris will be removed in an effort to find Mr. Coleman's shotgun which was believed used in the killing and possibly other objects that many prove valuable clews.

Clothes of Mr. Coleman are missing from the house, it was said, and investigators say that if the crime was committed by the two colored men seen in the Coleman car they may have switched clothing and thrown theirs into the well. Sheriff Maxie L. Blaydes and Commonwealth's Attorney E. R. Carner pushed their investigation today.

Several colored men have been questioned within the last two days and let loose after they could account for their whereabouts on the night of murder.

Authorities still seek Connie Reeves and James Williams, escaped convicts, following identification of Reeves by Mercer Waller, filling station employe, as one of two men who were in the Coleman car when it came into his station last Tuesday night.

Father Arrested In Auto Fatality

Held for Threat to Driver in Son's Death.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., April 7.—Joe Parrish, 33, father of 9-year-old Edward Parrish, killed Thursday night when run down by an automobile, was arrested today and charged with threatening to kill Thomas A. Stanford, jr., accused of operating the death car. Parrish, who was out of town at the time of his son's death, returned to the city yesterday and late last night went to Stanford's home. His requests for admission to the house were denied, he said.

It was then that residents of the neighborhood told police they heard a man threatening to "kill you, because there was no excuse for killing my boy."

Police aid was summoned and Detective Sergeants Brown and Kelley seized Parrish as he stood on the porch of the Stanford home, hammering on the door and shouting.

Autoist Exonerated.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 7.—A coroner's jury at Carlisle, Pa., has exonerated Ray Schultz, Hagerstown, of blame in an accident several weeks ago in which two passengers of the car which he was driving were killed near Carlisle. Roy DeVault and George Martin, who with Schultz were returning from a business gathering at Harrisburg, were killed.

Thrilling Chancellorsville Scenes to Be Depicted

Rewards Offered For Pyromaniacs

Berkeley Springs Wages Drive Against Arson.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., April 7.—Rewards have been offered here for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person or persons suspected of firebug activity during the past two weeks. The rewards were proclaimed following discovery of evidence that two properties had been fired but fortunately did not burn.

Ashes of burned paper and charred timbers were found in a warehouse and a home here, strengthening the belief that an incendiary is at work. Three properties previously had been identified as objects of the firebug and the $10,000 fire at Dunn Hotel here two weeks ago also was suspected of having been fired purposely. Two deputy fire marshals here last week questioned one person but later released him.

The rewards have been offered by the municipality, the local post of the American Legion, the local Kiwanis Club and the publisher of the weekly newspaper here.

Frostburg Sportsmen Elect.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frostburg, Md., April 7.—Following a public mass meeting of local sportsmen in Firemen's Hall, a Frostburg unit of the Square Circle sportsmen's association was formed with the following officers: Jonathan Sleeman, former member of the House of Delegates, president; Francis Crowe, vice president; Jennings Shertzer, secretary-treasurer.

Quail on Her Nest Defies Motorists

Chestertown, Md., April 7 (AP).—A mother quail, ordinarily the most jittery of the feathered tribe, is causing Chester River Yacht and Country Club officials no little concern.

The quail and her nest, harassed club members say, has become a veritable menace to traffic.

She has established herself and family in almost the exact center of the cinder drive leading to the club, and thus far has refused to budge for motorists, compelling them to maneuver carefully around her.

Convinced that Madam Quail has no intention of shifting her brood, club officials have placed a protecting ring of stones about the nest to warn cars away.

Highway Inquiry Sent to Shirley

Winchester Acts to Expedite U. S. Route 11.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., April 7.—In effort to ascertain in what ways, if any, local citizens may expedite the construction of U. S. Route 11, arterial highway north and south through the Shenandoah Valley, from the south corporate limit of the city to the West Virginia line 9 miles north, City Manager Arthur M. Field at the request of city council, has sent an inquiry to H. G. Shirley, highway commissioner.

In the letter he inclosed an agreement signed by the property holders of Valley avenue, over which the highway passes through this city, in which rights to claim damages that may be incurred as a result of the construction, are waived.

Likewise, it is understood locally that the property owners on the 9-mile gap from the north corporate limit to the West Virginia line have agreed to provide the necessary rights for an improved highway.

From Winchester south to Natural Bridge, the route has been reconstructed and with improvement of the road through Mount Crawford, this city is the only one in which the boulevard construction has not taken place.

Miss Mavin Hamilton To Marry on April 27

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., April 7.—Mr. and Mrs. William T. Hamilton, jr., of Hagerstown, have issued invitations for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Mavin Hamilton, granddaughter of the late Gov. William T. Hamilton of Maryland, to Eli Huston Brown 3d, of Louisville, Ky., which will take place at St. John's Episcopal Church, here, the evening of April 27.

A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents.

Along the Tri-State Trail

With

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor.

SUN-TANNED and armed with a thick stack of newspaper clippings, R. E. Burson, Virginia State director of parks, has returned from Florida to tell the thrill of landing a 200-pound marlin. The huge fish, the largest landed this year, was brought in by the park executive after a battle lasting an hour and a quarter.

Lashed to the boom of the boat he was fishing from, Burson fought the mighty fish while the crew of the ship tried frantically to lower the mainsail in order to maneuver the ship more easily. Finally, after the marlin weakened and 400 feet of the line had been taken in, it was gaffed and pulled into the cockpit.

And States in the tri-State area are still bartering wild animals of their woods. A crate of North Carolina quail have been sent to Lewis County, W. Va., to be released by conservation authorities for replenishing coveys for hunters.

Fishermen are waiting patiently for shad and other revenue-producing fish. Reports from Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries indicate the schools are still interested in sections other than local waters. Tidewater Virginia watermen, however, are certain runs will be of promising proportions by April 18, when the "moon fulls."

Saturday Mrs. Rachel Porter, oldest resident of Eckhart, Md., celebrated her ninety-fifth birthday still attending to her housework, alert and bright. Mrs. Porter has resided in that locality more than 80 years.

Whatever the training given the youths in the CCC camps of Morgan County, W. Va., it certainly agrees with them.

Capt. Thomas Barton, camp commander, told members of the Martinsburg Kiwanis Club that an average increase of 40 pounds per man has been recorded for one contingent of troops competing its enlistment.

Battle Over Will Renews in Court

Validdtion of Jones' 1921 Bequests Sought.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., April 7.—A new phase has been reached in the long litigation over the estate of the late W. J. Jones at Martinsville, who died in 1931, leaving property and effects valued at $60,000.

The last will he prepared, shortly before he died at the age of 91, and a deed conveying certain valuable property to J. Ben Davis were nullified by the Henry County Circuit Court on the theory that Jones was at that time incapacitated. This decision was sustained by the State Supreme Court.

The heirs at law then sought to have his property sold and a distribution made, but this action has been stayed by a new suit which seeks to validate a will he drew in 1921 and in which he bequeathed virtually all of the property to Mrs. Bessie Schultz and Miss Dulcie Goode.

AAA Pacts Slow, Red Tape Blamed

County Agent States Farmers Won't Be Bothered.

By the Associated Press.

Chestertown, Md., April 7.—A superabundance of "red tape" is one of the reasons given by J. D. McVean, Kent County agent, for a reduction in the number of county farmers signing Federal corn-hog curtailment contracts this year.

McVean contends farmers do not want to be bothered with the signing of numerous compliance documents. Another reason for the reduction, he says, is the fact that many tenant farmers have moved to farms where small corn acreage was grown in 1934, and have found they will need their full acreage this year.

Approximately 185 farmers have signed contracts thus far, McVean said, a figure which represents a marked reduction over last year.

Clubs at Annapolis Give Annual Revue

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., April 7.—That there is some excellent stage talent in the regiment of midshipmen at the United States Naval Academy was amply demonstrated yesterday when a large group of the embryo officers stepped before the footlights in the annual presentation by the combined musical clubs, vocal and instrumental.

"Passin' Revue" is the title of this year's show. It is an original production and most entertaining composite of music, both classic and jazz, and the program was replete with singing and dancing, and rollicking comedy and fun.

Crowds Visit Farm Linked With Deaths

Curious Sightseers Hunt Bones on Property of Accused Doctor.

Pennsylvania Physician Sullen in Cell Awaiting Trial in Court.

By the Associated Press.

Lancaster, Pa., April 7.—Particles of bone and pieces of clothing provided the only tangible clews today in the quest for Mrs. Gladys Lawson, missing patient of Dr. H. E. Zimmerly, elderly country physician, jailed for illegal ministrations.

Paul A Mueller, Lancaster County district attorney, who believes there is "little doubt" that the woman is dead, said the detective division of the State police will join his staff tomorrow in a renewed search of the grounds surrounding the ramshackle Zimmerly home, garage and barn in Mechanics Grove. Other bodies are sought, too, Mueller asserted.

Richard Parker, the doctor's hired man, who furnished some of the leads in the search, was removed from the county jail today for medical attention. He is charged with unlawfully possessing narcotics.

Accused Doctor Sullen.

Dr. Zimmerly, shabby and sullen, was denied visitors at his county jail cell. Two charges of illegal operations are against him. He will be arraigned Tuesday on narcotic charges. The doctor was imprisoned in 1919 for illegal operations, authorities said.

Dr. Louisia D. Keasbey, pathologist, is analyzing the bones, and J. E. Goodell, a chemist, is studying marks, believed made by blood, on the second floor of the Commercial Garage adjoining the Zimmerley house. Their reports are expected tomorrow, Mueller said.

The district attorney stated that if the bones prove not to be from a human body the analysis will bear out the theory of members of his detective staff that Mrs. Lawson's body is buried, perhaps with others, in nearby fields.

The bones half fill an ordinary cigar box. Jacob Weller, county detective, described one piece as a jawbone with a tooth in it. They were found in ash heaps near the home. The clothing, identified as Mrs. Lawson's, was found in the house.

Tells of Gruesome View.

Weller quoted Parker as saying he sharpened a butcher knife for the doctor and saw him "hacking away" at the woman's body. Miss Blanche Stone, who identified herself as the housekeeper at the Zimmerly home, related at the doctor's hearing that she last saw and heard Mrs. Lawson in an upstairs room, where she was apparently in terrible pain. The next morning, March 16, she said the doctor told her she was to say he had taken Mrs. Lawson to Lancaster if anybody asked questions.

Hundreds of curiosity seekers swarmed upon the Zimmerly property today. Many were on their knees sifting the ashes and dirt. Several more pieces of bone were unearthed, but their condition prevented immediate identification as human.

The property is located at a crossroads. One of the highways is a heavily traveled concrete path to Baltimore. Pretzel venders, with an eye to business, were on hand and one man set up an ice cream booth. State highway patrolmen kept traffic moving.

Liquor Sale to Child Denied.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., April 7. Rankin Taylor, Charles Town, arrested several days ago charged with selling a half gallon of whisky to an 11-year-old boy, pleaded not guilty before United States Commissioner Marshall Homer in Martinsburg yesterday. He was held on $1,000 bond until next session of Federal court in Elkins.

Off to Washington on an early afternoon train . . . The best home run of all . . .

Boxer's Suspension Row Stirs New Charges; Rehearing Set

By the Associated Press.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., April 7.—A dispute that started with the suspension of one prize fighter has branched out to involve two others, a manager, and possibly others.

"Everyone connected" with the fight card in Fairmont last Thursday night was mentioned by three Huntington deputy boxing commissioners in declaring they have information that two boxers on the program were boxing under assumed names.

W. T. Bess, one of the deputy commissioners, announced they had called a rehearing for next Thursday in the case of "Alabama Kid," Dayton, Ohio, Negro, whom the commissioners had attempted to suspend for 90 days and fined $50 for his poor showing in a Huntington fight.

The deputies, he said, will demand a heavier penalty than that. Their previous decision was said by Kenna Clark, of Fairmont, a State commissioner, to have been without effect. Clark said they had no authority to take such action.

Bess and Deputies T. B. Rardin and Dr. B. W. West said they understood that Johnny Allen, of Kansas City, who fought in the Fairmont program, is really Jimmy Allen, of Huntington, and that Young Jack Johnson, appearing on the same card and giving his address as Kansas City, is Pedro Lopez, of Huntington.

Their action against the "Alabama Kid" was taken after his bout here with "Tiger" Hairston. Bess said Hairston's manager, Jack Shepherd, also is manager of Jimmy Allen and Otis Gardner, who was knocked out in Fairmont by Johnson.

The rehearing, he said, was called on suggestion of Fred O. Conchrane, of Parkersburg, secretary of the State athletic commission. Max Yinger, the "Alabama Kid's" manager, accepted the summons.

The Huntington deputies want to hear also from Clark as a commissioner, and from a Fairmont sports editor who saw the fights Thursday.

282 Totals Deadlock On Links

220-Yard Clout Drops Into 15th Cup for 2 on Par-5 Hole.

Leaders Play Today at 36 Holes; O. Dutra Finishes in 32.

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—Gene Sarazen, long famous for his spectacular finishes, fired the golfing shot of a lifetime today to tie Craig Wood, the belting blond from Deal, N. J., for first place in the Augusta National Golf Club's $5,000 Invitation Tournament. Each finished the 72 holes in 282, six under par.

Trailing Wood by two strokes in a seemingly hopeless pursuit, with only four holes to go and subpar golf necessary to have a chance, Sarazen blasted a 220-yard spoon shot that carried true all the way and rolled into the cup for a 2 on the 485-yard par 5 fifteenth hole.

This astounding "double eagle," as rare as a hole-in-one, electrified a gallery of 2,000, pulled Sarazen up to even terms with Wood, who had bagged a birdie on the fifteenth, and enabled Gene to keep deadlocked with his rival by playing par golf over the last three holes in one of the most exciting finishes any tournament has seen in years.

Starts 3 Shots Behind.

Sarazen started the final round three shots behind Wood, who had taken over the pace-setting position yesterday, and made them all up by negotiating the rain-soaked course in near-freezing weather with a 70, two under par, while Wood was finishing with a 73. Gene scored successive rounds of 68—71—73—70, while Craig Wood produced scores of 69—72—68—73 for totals of 282.

They will play off for first place money of $1,500 at 36 holes tomorrow starting at 10 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. (E. S. T.).

The finish that these two hard-hitting professionals waged, with Wood first blasting out a 34 and Sarazen then coming along with a 33 on the home stretch, contrasted with the collapse or near collapse of most of the other favorites and the disappointing finish of the renowned Robert T. Jones, jr.

Jones, lacking his old skill or confidence on the greens, finished with his worst round, a 78, and wound up in a triple tie for twenty-fifth place with Mike Turnesa and Harry Cooper at 297. This compared with his mark of 294 for thirteenth place in last year's tournament.

Olin Dutra Is Third.

Olin Dutra, only a single stroke behind Wood at the outset of the fourth round, went to pieces and carded 42, six over par, for the outgoing nine holes before rallying with an amazing 32, four under par, to post a 74 that gave him third money with a total of 284.

The National Open champion's last nine was the best in the tournament, but he would have needed the luck to match Sarazen's "double eagle" on the fifteenth to offset that weird outward stretch, including a six on the third hole, where he dubbed four successive shots.

Tall Henry Picard, the Hershey (Pa.) professional, who set so dazzling a pace for two rounds with 135 for 36 holes, also tossed away his chances on today's first nine. He finished with a 75 for 286 that clinched fourth money, a stroke ahead of Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, who had 287.

Little Even Par.

Burly W. Lawson Little, jr., of San Francisco, holder of both American and British amateur crowns, not only carried off the honors among the Simon-pures by a wide margin, but had the satisfaction of finishing sixth in an all-star field by shooting 72 on his last round for a total of 288, even par for the full route.

Little's last round was in many respects the most amazing of the day. It included six birdies as well as some wild and wooly shotmaking.

He took off one shoe and stocking, stood in several inches of water and scooped his ball out of the creek and onto the short twelfth green with a remarkable recovery, only to take three putts. He sank five putts otherwise ranging from 10 to 25 feet and made good his par goal by dropping a 16-footer on the final green for his last birdie.

Little, playing with Jones, whipped the former world champion by six strokes today and finished nine shots ahead of the Georgian for the 72 holes. Out in 40 in raw, wintry weather, Bob never was able to get consistent results. He was hitting the ball well on the last nine, but missed three chances for birdies and had a struggle finally to keep under 80.

Wood Starts Poorly.

As first one, then another, of the front-runners started to "blow" on the outgoing nine, it was a dog fight until Wood and Sarazen got the range on the incoming half of the soggy course. Wood himself started poorly, getting into trouble on three of the first four holes and saving himself only with accurate putts. He lost a stroke to Sarazen on the second, another on the third, got one back on the short fourth, where Gene hit a poor tee shot, but had his advantage completely wiped out on the next two holes.

Wood three-putted the fifth and missed the short sixth green, taking a 4, while Sarazen got his pars easily on both. All square, with 12 holes to go, Gene dropped a stroke at the ninth, where he drove

Wood to Try Again, Possibly Tomorrow

Miami Beach, Fla., April 7 (AP).—Having virtually completed minor adjustments to his Miss America X, Gar Wood tonight planned to make a second attempt shortly to better his own world's motor boat speed record. He may run Tuesday.

He wheeled the trim 38-foot craft twice over a measured mile course on Indian Creek yesterday, but the highest speed he could get was 119.09 miles an hour.

Frenchman Wins $58,181 on Parlay

By the United Press.

Lyons, France, April 7.—An unidentified plunger broke the provincial pari-mutuel record for winnings today when he pyramided a 50-franc win and 50-franc place four-way parlay into 481,542 francs ($58,181.77).

His bets were on Perseis, Hanoi, Rentenmark and Folle Passion at Longchamp and all finished first.

U. S. Boosts Tank Hopes For 1936

Pre-Olympic Meet in Japan This Summer Next Objective.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 7.—On the basis of developments in the National Collegiate A. A. U. and National Senior A. A. U. swimming championships the last ten days, the United States can look forward to the 1936 Olympics with new hope of checking Japan's natators, surprise conquerors of the world three years ago at Los Angeles.

After watching the pick of the country's mermen in the two major indoor championships, the swimming committee of the Amateur Athletic Union, headed by Bob Kiphuth, veteran Yale coach, today selected a group of 45 swimmers to point for the final tryouts for an all-American team which will invade Japan this summer for a three-day international meet.

Medica Seen No. 1.

The team, which will be selected at the national outdoor championships to be held in July at a place yet to be designated, will include 14 swimmers, one diver—probably Dick Degener, Marshall Wayne or Elbert Root—and Kiphuth as manager.

Although no definite selections have been officially made there is no disputing the fact that the No. 1 will be 20-year-old Jack Medica, the Pacific powerhouse, who hung up a world's record of 5:16.3 for 500 yards, decimating his old mark of 5:26.6, and turned in a 2:10.8 "220" to capture the national championship for that distance in the fastest time ever made in titular competition.

The Seattle streak's performances in these events easily stood out as the greatest individual feats in the forty-seventh senior national A. A. U. meet which concluded in the New York pool last night. In both events he was confronted with such formidable rivals as Jim Gilhula, of Southern California; Ralph Flanagan, of Miami, and youthful John Macionis, of Yale.

In the "200" that field pushed the world's outstanding free-style swimmer to the lowest competitive record in history, but in the "500" they merely battled among themselves as Medica, sprinting the last 400 yards and churning the water into a boiling foam, finished 25 yards in front and came close to lapping the field.

One Other Record.

Only one other world's record fell during the three-day meet. Sixteen-year-old Adolph Kiefer, of the Lake Shore A. C. of Chicago shattered the universal clocking for the 150-yard back-stroke mark of 1:36.9 with a 1:36.1 achievement, while Danny Zehr, of Fort Wayne, Ind., the 1933 back-stroke king, touched a foot behind in 1:36.2.

The American record for the 300-yard medley relay was broken three times yesterday, twice by the Lake Shore trio, comprising Kiefer, Max Brydenthal and Charles Flachmann, who did 2:59.9 in the trials and 2:57.7 in the final, and the Olneyville Boys Club, of Providence, which was clocked in 2:59.8 in the final heat. The old mark of 3:01.2 was held by the New York A. C.

Fall Meeting Weighed By Deep Run Hunt Club

Richmond, Va., April 7 (AP).—The Deep Run Hunt Club's race meeting, run in the rain at Curles Neck yesterday, was such a success in spite of the rain that members of the committee are looking forward to the establishment of a fall meeting.

Matters of transportation, competition with other fall horse shows, as well as football games and other considerations are to be met, however, before the plan develops further.

Cruickshank's P. G. A. Case Up Today

Long Battle Is Expected; Tourney to Be Held at Woodholme.

AS Washington's contingent of golf pros left last night for Woodholme Country Club, Baltimore, to compete in today's first official Middle Atlantic P. G. A. tournament, sentiment from a District angle favored the automatic qualification of Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond pro, for the Japanese team matches scheduled June 1-2 at Kenwood.

A number of leading District pros, including the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. president, Al Treder, felt that the Wee Scot should not be asked to qualify in the 18-hole round this morning at Woodholme and at Beaver Dam on April 29, inasmuch as he is a tremendous drawing card and is famous enough to be honored with a berth on the American team.

When the Middle Atlantic pros meet today a long fight over the issue is expected from the Baltimore pros, some of whom already have indicated they will oppose the automatic selection of Cruickshank as one of the six members to meet the Nipponese stars. The vote promises to be close, but staunch supporters of the Wee Scott, who left Augusta last night for his home, are determined to put up a strong front.

Division of Gate.

It is understood that the National P. G. A. will receive $300 of the gate, the Middle Atlantic P. G. A., $200, and the rest will go to the Japanese—provided the gate reaches the total expected.

Today's 18-hole qualifying round will be followed by an 18-hole pro-amateur sweepstakes in the afternoon. Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro, will team with Walter McCallum and Cliff Spencer,

Cal Griffith Gets Chattanooga Job

Is Lost to Colonials' Nine; to Return in Fall.

Calvin Griffith, adopted son of the Washington Baseball Club owner, left last night for Chattanooga to take over the reins of business manager and secretary-treasurer of the Lookouts, Clark Griffith announced.

The 22-year-old Griffith, who was counted on as the mainstay of the George Washington University pitching staff, will resume his studies at college in the fall. He is a junior.

'It Took the Army,' Quips Biff's Rival

Young Poloist, Hurt in Tilt, Succumbs

Eckford Rufner, 17, Player for Ridgewood, N. J., Pinned by Horse.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Eckford Rufner, 17-year-old polo player from Ridgewood, N. J., died today of injuries suffered in a polo game last night.

A member of the Ridgewood Riding Club's indoor trio, Rufner was injured in the second chukker of his team's match with Pennsylvania Military College for the Eastern junior championship.

In a spirited contest for the ball, Rufner attempted to turn his mount sharply. He lost his balance and fell, landing heavily on his head.

The pony lost his balance also and went down on top of the youngster, who was pinned to the floor for fully a minute before he could be extricated.

Rufner suffered intercranial hemmorhages, a probable fractured skull and internal injuries. He never regained consciousness.

Joe Benjamin Proves Poor Marksman in Cafe.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, April 7.—Joe Benjamin, prize-fighter and former husband of Marion Nixon, film actress, was reported by spectators to have struck unsuccessfully at Fred Perry, British tennis star in a fashionable cafe early today.

The one-swing, nondecision fight was added to a long list of such encounters in the screen capital. Several motion picture celebrities were present.

"I don't know who he was," Perry said. "He threw a cigaret at me, attempted to hit me. I noticed his general condition and refrained from striking back. I merely turned my back on the fellow and left."

Ruth Wallops Two Homers At Newark

Babe's Clouts Aid in 10-8 Victory; Maranville Plays at Short.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., April 7.—Two home runs by Babe Ruth enabled the Boston Braves to defeat the Newark Bears, champions of the International League, 10 to 8, today.

Ruth's first home run came in his first appearance at the plate. It was a hard line drive into the right field bleachers. The second, in the sixth inning, started the Braves on a hitting spree which netted seven runs. This second homer was the longest ever made at the local park, an attendant said.

Until the sixth inning the Newark team was leading the Braves, 7 to 1, as the result of a hard hitting attack on the offerings of Ray Prim and Larry Benton, Boston pitchers.

Maranville Sees Action.

The fans gave Rabbit Maranville a rousing welcome on his first appearance in the Braves' line-up since a leg fracture put him out of the line-up in the 1934 spring training.

Slightly favoring the injured leg, Maranville cavorted at shortstop with his old-time speed and skill and handled five difficult chances, though he was credited with one error. He faile to hit in four times at bat.

Phils Again Beat A's.

Philadelphia, April 7 (AP).—The Phillies defeated the Athletics, 8 to 3, today for their second straight triumph over Connie Macks' team.

The Phillies had their home-run bats working, Johnny Moore, Watkins and Camilli each putting one over the wall.

Joe Cascarella started on the mound for the Macks and was hit to all corners of the lot. He was opposed by Phil Collins, who allowed only five blows in the five innings he hurled.

A double by Moses and a single by Jimmy Foxx gave the A's their first tally in the opening inning. The Macks picked up their other two runs off E. Moore. One of these was due to a streak of wildness on Moore's part in the eighth, when he issued two passes and Warstler hit a double.

Nats Return Today, Face 4 Games

Cubs Game Snowed Out; Braves, With Ruth, Here Tomorrow.

Cancellation at Chicago Robs Team of Much-Needed Practice.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

EN ROUTE TO WASHINGTON WITH THE NATS, April 7.—The Nats' barnstorming trip ended today on the sour note of a cancellation in Chicago where arctic blasts swept an exhibition game with the Cubs off the schedule, and the team was heading home tonight still labeled as of unknown quality. Manager Bucky Harris will present his team for the approval of the home public on Tuesday when Babe Ruth leads the Boston Braves into Griffith Stadium, but the Nats' pilot, irked by the rain and cold which has dogged the team's trail since it broke camp in Biloxi March 28, has ordered his players to turn out for practice tomorrow shortly after detraining at 9 a. m.

Six of the Nats' ten scheduled games on their northern jaunt were rained out or snowed under, and Harris leads a laggard team back to Washington, almost shuddering at the prospects of opening the pennant campaign only nine days hence.

Hurlers Not Ready.

Not a single Washington pitcher has worked more than 15 innings in competition since the team started training and at this writing only Bobby Burke, Earl Whitehill and Ed Linke, of the pitching staff, are regarded as fit to take starting roles. And there are other items that are annoying Harris no little.

The team, conceded to be a powerful hitting club even in the face of its seventh-place finish last year, is not hitting. Throughout the Biloxi stay and in the four exhibition games on the road, the club's batting has been little short of pathetic. Firm in his belief that the team will hit, Harris, however, would be glad to learn when that state of affairs will begin.

From out of the South Harris brings to Washington a ball club that has undergone two important changes. Chief among them is the installation of Jake Powell in center field. The fleet Powell, hailed as the 1935 sensation as a base runner, and a clever fly chaser, has completely ousted Fred Schulte from the center field job.

Waits Final Approval.

Harris, however, is holding in abeyance his complete approval of Powell, for as yet there is no certainty that he can hit big league pitching despite his .361 average at Albany last year.

The second new face in the Washington line-up is that of Lyn Lary, the shortstop obtained from Boston in the Cronin deal. Red Kress' hitting has almost subsided in the battle for the shortstop job. Harris gave Kress his fling at the position in the early games and the redhead stamped himself as a power contender, with his hitting, particularly.

But Lary now occupies Harris' favor. His choice of Lary to start every game since the team broke camp indicates the trend. Lary has proven himself a superlative fielder, but his hitting threatens his status as the No. 1 shortstop. He will, however, start the season.

Thus, Ossie Bluege has been definitely shelved as the regular short-

Sarazen's Double Eagle Crows New Tune As Odds of 1 to 500 Drop to Even Money

By Paul Gallico.

A Special Correspondent.

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 7.—How would you like to come into a par 5 hole in an important championship tourney with the knowledge that the winner was already sitting in the clubhouse, toasting his toes in front of a log fire and sipping a glass of corn likker and mentally adding $1,500 to his bank account?

You were figured out of the running for the championship because you had taken 37 on the first nine and needed a 33 on the back nine to tie, and a 32 to win. And since you hadn't done any better than even par up to the fifteenth hole, you had to figure as you stood on the tee that you would have to score an eagle on the par 5 hole, and a birdie somewhere else along the line even to tie the score.

And that sort of thing isn't done on the Augusta national course, and so if you were you, or if you weren't you, you would give up and play along for second money.

Well, that was Gene Sarazen's spot, this cold, damp, penetrating afternoon. Craig Wood had the tournament won with a 282. He had been photographed and autographed and the show was over when Sarazen came to the fifteenth tee, needing a 3 on the par 5 hole, and a 2 on the par 3 short one that followed.

The fifteenth at Augusta is 485 yards long. You drive over a little slope and get yourself a down-hill, hanging lie for your second to a green that is small, sloping, and protected by a small brook that to the left widens out into a small, long pond. The green built to hold a pitched third shot, but is severe with long, hard-hit brassie seconds. This was the problem that Sarazen had to surmount with three strokes. One drive, one approach, one putt, two under par.

Now, yesterday, Sarazen and Col. Bob, Jones' father, were talking, and Sarazen said to Col. Bob, "Colonel, you're presenting the cup and the check, aren't you?" The colonel said that he was. "Well," said Sarazen, "get a good speech ready, because you are going to present it to me."

And so, as he stood on the fifteenth tee, it looked as though Cocky would have to duck the colonel back in the clubhouse, when Bob, sr., presented the check and the cup to Craig Wood. And now that you have the picture and the setting, except for the gray sky, the different colored greens, of trees and fairways and bushes and grass, and the gallery strung out from tee to far distant green, here is what Sarazen did, and how he did it:

He hit his drive straight down the middle, 255 yards, and about 3 yards back of Walter Hagen, with whom

Wolfram to Battle Doherty Tonight in 10-Round 'Natural'

Irish Invader Called Club Fighter

Ahearn, Joe Turner and Even His Manager Are Elated.

LIGHT as a feather and walking on air, Joe Doherty, Brooklyn's gift to the featherweight fight class, arrived here yesterday, highly elated that he was to met Frankie Wolfram in a ten-rounder at the Auditorium tonight which he feels will lift him into the big league division of fist-wavers. Just as elated was Artie Coakley, Joe's manager, who acted as mouthpiece while Doherty nodded silent, but vehement assent.

"Doherty's the club fighter type that can't miss here," Artie predicted. "If Frankie Covelli and Pete DeCrasse set the fans wild here, Doherty will rock them to their heels."

"This kid will take any chance in the world to provide an extra thrill," Coakley insisted. "He throws more leather to the square inch than any other kid I've ever seen or handled."

Ahearn Enthusiastic.

Aware of Washington's liking for the speed boys who say it with wallops, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, who arranged the bout between the Shantytown slammer and Wolfram, is just as enthusiastic about the match as is Herbert.

"It's a natural," sputtered Goldilocks a la Jimmy Durante, when approached on the subject yesterday. "Everybuddy knows how good is it dis guy Wolfram, an', after de fight, everybuddy'll know how good is it dis guy Doherty. He's a nacheral—21, strong, fast and wid plenty of de ole moxie—whatta fight dis'll be, wadda fight?"

Joe Turner, promoter of the bout, also waxed enthusiastic about the match.

"This guy whatcha-may-call-it is a great fighter," Joe stated, in his own inimitable manner. Whether Joe's whatcha-may-call-it referred to Joe Doherty, Joe Lewis, Frankie Wolfram or Max Baer always will remain one of life's little mysteries.

Supporting Card.

The entire supporting card will be made up of boxers below the middleweight division, with two sixes featuring featherweights, one lightweight six and an opening four presenting two colored welterweights.

In one of the featherweight contests, Joe Green will tackle Les Guesno, who took an unanimous decision from him in a recent Baltimore battle. In another 126-pound duel, Harry Jeffra will square off against Lloyd Pine. Ray (Kid) Ingram, pleasing Florida lightweight, will take on Wesley Martin in the lightweight encounter.

Young Tiger Salmons and Gerald (Rufus) Reeder are the dusky welters who will open the proceedings.

Post Predictions.

Bouts are rated from A (excellent) to G (the opposite).

Main event—Joe Doherty, Brooklyn, vs. Frankie Wolfram, Toledo, featherweights; ten rounds. Rated B. Doherty moves too rapidly for the heavy-hitting Wolfram and should take him without too much trouble if he doesn't impale himself on one of Frankie's sleep-producing punches.

Semifinal—Ray (Kid) Ingram, Florida, vs. Wesley Martin, Baltimore, lightweights; six rounds. Rated C. Ingram is getting into fine fighting fettle and should handle Martin with the greatest of ease.

Preliminaries—Harry Jeffra, Baltimore, vs. Lloyd Pine, Philadelphia, featherweights; six rounds. Rated D. Jeffra.

Young Tiger Salmons, vs. Gerald Reeder, welterweights; four rounds. Rated C. This should be hilarious, with Salmons winning the decision.

Cruickshank Case Comes Up Today

Beaver Dam pro, and Jess Baggett, will be partners. George Diffenbaugh and Roger Peacock are the pro-amateur favorites.

Manor may be selected for the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. golf championship and Rolling Road for the National P. G. A. qualifying trials.

On his way north to resume his duties as pro at the Philadelphia Country Club, Ed Dudley, winter pro at the Augusta Country Club, plans to stop over in Washington tomorrow and play a round at Congressional's course. Dudley has promised Congressman Stewart, of Delaware, to play with him. Roland Mackenzie and Earl Chesney will round out the foursome.

Results in the modified blind bogey at Beaver Dam yesterday follow:

First flight—Carl Carey, J. R. Balristra, Johnny Miller; second flight, R. Fleming, E. Degemer, R. M. Brown; third flight, R. E. Zuber, A. U. Smith, J. Haney; fourth flight, V. Cameron, E. G. Carroll, A. Haas.

The most disappointed man at Beaver Dam yesterday was C. E. Purdy. His six-iron shot on the 135-yard fourteenth lacked 1 inch of holding out for an ace—something he has been trying to make for ten years. W. M. Davies, Earl Sechrest and J. F. Hoover, companions, expressed their sympathy.

John Holzberg was one of the few golfers at Indian Spring to tackle the full 18 holes yesterday, and he was rewarded with a 78. The others quit after nine because of the cold and high wind.

Beaver Dam and Columbia are prime favorites to add to their huge lead in the second team matches at Manor this morning. Beaver Dam scored 12 points against Woodmont and Columbia 11 against Indian Spring last week.

Colonials' Nine Tries to Open Third Time

Faces Washington College Today; Joe Judge to Toss First Ball.

SHACKLED all last week by that persistent old gent, Jupe Pluvius, George Washington's equally persistent baseball squad will make a third attempt to inaugurate its 1935 campaign this afternoon at Griffith Stadium, with Washington College supplying the competition. If all goes well the game will get under way at 3 o'clock.

Judge to Attend.

Joe Judge, Washington first baseman when the Nats were bagging their first two pennants under Bucky Harris, will throw out the first ball, officially opening the season—for George Washington. Judge probably will be the only man to throw out a first ball this season without pulling up with a sore arm.

Ed Morris, the rotund moving and storage man and coach of the downtown team, last night verified the line-up for opening day as he did so obligingly twice last week. He plans to start Lefty Johnson at first; Jack Williams, second; Burt Webb, left field; Tim Stapleton, shortstop; Bill Albert, center field; Bill Dale, third; Melfolden or Horn, right field; Berg and the pitcher.

Two of the most useful men on the Maryland baseball roster this spring will be "South" Sothoron, an infielder, and "Lil Stumpy" Keller, outfielder. Keller's batting stock was up to .508 after Maryland's third game last week, while Sothoron, as stewart of the dining room, gave a good account of himself, batting .428.

Keller, whose, hands, it is rumored, bring him a profitable income modeling for steam shovels, is fast, aggressive and a good outfielder. Sothoron, while a fighter, takes the sport in milder fashion and probably enjoys it as much.

Too bad "Nick" Nicketakis, Georgetown's freshman southpaw, isn't up with the varsity where Joe Saverine could handle him. The freshman catchers aren't accustomed to stopping bullet-like shots, and consequently are losing innumerable third strikes. "Nick" is potential big-league timber.

Catholic University's student paper reporters are arranging Coach "Dutch" Bergman's football schedule for him—a big relief for "Dutch," if their plans materialize. Wisconsin has been placed on the schedule, and we understand Southern California is next—whether it likes it or not.

Football Clinic May Be Held Annually

Program of C. U. School Friday and Saturday Is Announced.

WITH Andy Kerr, famous Colgate University coach, assuming the role of director, the football clinic which will be conducted Friday and Saturday at Catholic University under sponsorship of Treman-King may become an annual affair, A. J. (Dutch) Bergman said last night.

The program for Friday offers the following:

James Pixlee, of George Washington, line play offense; Tom Hamilton, Navy, offense; John Hagerty, of Georgetown, forward pass offense; Curley Byrd or Jack Faber, Maryland offense; Arthur Bergman, of Catholic University, Notre Dame offense; Andy Kerr, offense (single wing).

Saturday's program:

Pixlee, line play defense; Hamilton, Navy defense; Hagerty, forward pass defense; Byrd or Faber, Maryland defense; Bergman, Notre Dame defense; Kerr, defense (single wing).

Only coaches and athletic directors will be invited.

Women Golf Aces Vie at Pinehurst

Miss Glutting Will Start Title Defense Today.

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., April 7.—Charlotte Glutting, of East Orange, N. J., who several years ago was a semi-finalist in the national women's golf championship, will start defense of her North and South title here tomorrow against a field of 64.

Chief opposition is expected from Deborah Verry, of Worcester, Mass., runner-up last year, and Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I.

Other strong competitors include Edith Quier, Reading, Pa.; Helen Waring, North Carolina champion; Estelle Lawson, of Chapel Hill, N. C.; Mrs. R. H. Barlow, five-time winner of the Eastern title; Alice Rutherford, young New Jersey star, and Mrs. F. P. Lindh and Barbara Stoddard, of Long Island.

Naomi Zimmerman Captures Women's U.S. Pin Sweepstakes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BALTIMORE, April 7.—Naomi Zimmerman, captain of the Tivoli team, Baltimore's newly crowned national women's duckpin champions, heaped additional honors on herself here tonight at the Recreation alleys when she won the women's United States Sweepstakes with a nine-game score of 1,062. Nineteen of the country's leading duckpinners competed, including five from Washington. Her three sets were 385, 354 and 323.

Right on the heels of the Oriole star was Lorraine Gulli, Washington's raigning queen of the maple ways, who finished second with 1,050. With a bit more luck, the Capitol'spride might have won, but several headpin splits in her last game beset her best efforts.

Kay Heinzenberger, Baltimore, finished third with 1,025, while Ida Simmons, Norfolk's foremost girl bowler, was fourth with 1,019. Fifth place went to Christine Kirk, of Bridgeport, with 1,018. Billie Butler, Washington's defending champion, was twelfth with 958.

Sarazen, Wood Tie for Title At Augusta

Gene Sinks 220-Yard Shot for 2 on Par-5 Hole; 282 Totals Best.

into the rough, played wide of the green and took a 5 for an outgoing 37. Wood had a 39.

Both three-putted the tenth, collected pars on the next two, then birdies on the 480-yard thirteenth, where Wood was home in two while Sarazen played safe and chipped across the ditch to get down a 6-foot putt.

Gene's "Greatest Thrill."

A birdie 3 at the fourteenth, thanks to a 12-foot putt, gave Wood a two-stroke margin and set the stage for the shot of the tournament on the fifteenth. Craig got his birdie 4 on this 485-yarder, with the aid of two fine shots to the green, but Gene hit the bulls-eye with his spoon second shot for the deuce that echoed over the rolling countryside in the gallery's wild shouts.

"What was your first thought when you saw the ball roll into the cup?" someone asked Gene.

"I started figuring," he replied. "It was the greatest thrill I have ever had on a golf course. I realized all I needed was a par to tie."

Sarazen was actually in front when he got the first of his pars, a 3 on the short fifteenth, where Craig Wood three-putted, and still a stroke in front with a 4 at the seventeenth, matching Wood's performance. But Craig had dropped a 16-footer for a birdie 3 on the eighteenth to make the target tougher to find and Gene was satisfied to get a final 4.

Both Terrific Hitters.

Sarazen and Wood are well matched for the play-off. Both are terrific hitters. Gene is a more consistent iron player, especially with the niblick, but Wood has the edge on the greens, based on their performances so far. Sarazen hasn't won a big tournament since 1933, when he last captured the national P. G. A. championship, while Wood has never won a title event. Craig has been a big money winner, however, and was runner-up here last year to Horton Smith, who finished with 296.

Walter Hagen, the old campaigner, tossed away his chances of landing close to the top by carding a final 79 for a total of 293. Trailing Hagen as well as Jones were such other former champions as Willie Macfarlane with 299, Tommy Armour, Johnny Farrell and Bill Burke, each with 302.

Two Counties to Vie In Sports Day Program

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Heathsville, Va., April 7.—Plans are being made for the Northumberland Lancaster - Northumberland Sports Day to be held at White Stone, Lancaster County, on May 8, when the bi-county athletic program will be presented. The schools of the two counties are conducting elimination contests in baseball and basket ball. The winning teams will play for the championship at White Stone.

This sports event annually attracts thousands from the Northern Neck.

Atlanta's Net Tourney Gets Under Way Today

Atlanta, April 7 (AP).—At least three of the Nation's top-ranking players are slated to compete in the Atlanta Invitation Tennis Tournament which opens tomorrow at the Biltmore Club.

The three are Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., No. 1 ranking player of 1934; Berkeley Bell, of New York, ranking No. 7, and Bryan Grant, of Atlanta.

Yachts Leave Havana.

Havana, April 7 (AP).—Favored by a strong southeast wind, 14 yachts got away today from the starting line in the Havana-to-Key West race.

Virginia Nines In 13 Games This Week

W. & M. and W. & L. Tie for State Loop Lead; Rain Hurts Play.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, April 7.—After a week of scheduled baseball games in which the weather man scored 14 verdicts against 7 victories by the combined opposition, graduate managers in Virginia were penciling "weather permitting" on this week's 13-game card.

Four Northern teams that came down to the Sunny South for a week of competition with Virginia teams spent most of the time wrapping themselves around radiators and scraping the mud off their shoes. Two of them will stick around a week longer, awaiting the weather man's verdict.

William and Mary, victor over V. P. I., 7 to 2, in the only State game on the program, moved to the top of the league with Washington and Lee, each showing a pair of victories in the State race, while the Indians, victorious in three of four games against all opposition, showed the best general average with the exception of Virginia's Cavaliers, who won their only game. A 4-to-2 victory over Dartmouth, combined with the triumph over Tech, gave the Indians a perfect score for the week.

Shutout for Virginia.

Virginia's Cavaliers, apparently headed for a fine season with a veteran team and a fine hurling corps, scored the season's first shutout when Orlin Rogers and Bud Abbitt, sophomore sensation, whipped Vermont, 4 to 0. The Green Mountain lads lost the following afternoon to Washington and Lee, 6 to 1. But another Northern foe, Dartmouth, overpowered the Generals Friday, 4 to 0.

Randolph-Macon did better at home than on foreign soil, whipping Delaware, 8 to 3, Friday after losing 5-3 decisions to both Guilford and Wake Forest.

The State race will gain momentum this week, with six of the contests between Old Dominion foes. Virginia Tech's sophomore nine will battle Roanoke at Blacksburg Wednesday in the Maroons' opener and then the Techmen will push on to Lexington for games Friday and Saturday with Washington and Lee.

Other State Games.

Other State games will pit Richmond against Randolph-Macon at Ashland Thursday; V. M. I. against Virginia at Lexington Saturday and Roanoke against William and Mary at Salem Saturday.

Another Northern invader, the strong Long Island University nine, will play Washington and Lee at Lexington tomorrow, while William and Mary will take on Vermont at Williamsburg. Richmond will clash with the Medical College nine at Richmond.

Vermont will meet Randolph-Macon at Ashland Tuesday, while the Michigan nine will battle Virginia at Charlottesville Wednesday.

Other games pit Hampden-Sydney against the Union Theological Seminary and Randolph-Macon against the Medical College at Ashland Saturday.

Mat-Boxing Card Is Set At Woodstock Friday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., April 7.—The first golden glove tournament ever held in Shenandoah County is scheduled here next Friday, it was announced here yesterday by members of the tournament committee. It is the plan to present four bouts in boxing and four in wrestling, with the winners being awarded gold gloves and medals symbolic of the county championship.

The main boxing event will be between Bill Allen, of the Shamrock Athletic Club, former Massanutten Military Academy boxer, and Paul Plauger, Powells Fort Valley boxer.

Nats Back Today; Face Four Games

stop. His third base job taken by Cecil Travis, Bluege will serve only when Lary and Kress both slump at the same time.

Back to Washington comes Cliff Bolton, perennial rookie, as the club's No. 1 catcher. Bolton is Harris' choice by reason of the fact that he is the best catcher among three rookies. He has yet to prove himself a steady performer, however, and the club's catching still must be listed as an unknown quantity. Few clubs, if any, have won a pennant, without a good, if not a great, catcher.

The Nats return with only one cripple on teh casualty list. He is Irving Hadley, who was left behind at Chattanooga for treatment to his pitching arm. Hadley's sore arm is another of the troubles that have arisen to plague Harris, for the right-hander obtained from the Browns at a cost of $20,000 was scheduled to do more pitching than any other member of the staff.

Kuhel in Shape.

The concern over Joe Kuhel's broken ankle has vanished, however. The first baseman, cautious at the outset, no longer is favoring his left leg.

On the bright side of the picture are numbered the cases of two pitchers—Bobby Burke and Henry Coppola. Burke at this writing is the farthest advanced of all of the Washington pitchers, untroubled for the firs: time in his career by a sore arm in training. Most effective of all the Nats' hurlers in the exhibition games, he is regarded by Harris as the man who rates second to Earl Whitehill in point of effectiveness for the club.

Young Coppola has been the genuine surprise of the Nats' training campaign. Neglected in teh early reckoning, he has come to the fore so rapidly that Harris is actually counting him a potential regular. He possesses the fastest pitch on the club with indications of fine control.

Of the other pitchers, Monte Weaver, Jack Russell, Al Thomas, Walter Stewart, Leon Pettit and Syd Cohen, only Petit, the Chattanooga acquisition, has manifested that he may help the team in the early days of the pennant race. Weaver's failure to round into form has been a shocking blow to Harris' hopes for his pitching staff.

The local exhibition schedule opens tomorrow when the Boston Braves, featuring Babe Ruth, display their wares at Griffith Stadium. Ruth's return to form is indicated by his two home runs against Newark yesterday, and a large crowd is anticipated for his debut here in a National League uniform.

Brooklyn's Dodgers play the Nats here Wednesday and Thursday, with the Philadelphia Nationals following on Friday. Albany's International Leaguers appear here Saturday.

Barton Picks Manager.

Barton, Md., April 7.—Leo "Toad" McNeil, of Klondyke, this county, first sacker of Midland teams for the last 20 years, has been appointed manager of the Barton Braves, of the Cumberland and Georges Creek Baseball League for 1935.

Staunton Lists Three Sports Schedules

Six Tests Each, Announced for Baseball, Track, Tennis Teams.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

STAUNTON, Va., April 7.—Devitt Prep School of Washington, D. C., has been awarded the second spot on the baseball schedule of Staunton Military Academy, the game to be played here May 4.

Staunton's track team will go to Washington on May 18 to participate in an invitation meet.

The locals' school spring sports schedules have been announced, covering baseball, track and tennis—with six engagements in each field of athletic pastime.

Coach Tom Howie faces the task of whipping into shape a new baseball team, there being but three letter men returning this season—Bliss, at first, and Ward and Jones, outfielders. Daniels, speedball artist, will be used if he can gain more control.

Face Hard Schedule.

Capt. Harry Day's trackmen face a hard schedule, and also will be defending last year's prep school title. However, Watson, Gold, McGrael, Fryer, Bunsa and DeLiberty, of the championship team, are back again this year. Watson and Gold are co-captains. The former is a record holder in the pole vault, and is broad jumper and dash man of note. He jumped well over 23 feet last year. Gold holds the State record in high hurdles, while McGrael annexed the State title last year in the mile run.

Staunton's tennis prospects are bright, with several letter men returning, noteworthy among them, Kerdasha.

The schedules:

Baseball.

April 27, Woodberry Forest School, here. May 4, Devitt Prep of Washington, here; 7, Fishburne Military School, here; 11, Harrgrave Military Academy, here; 18, Massanutten Military Academy, here; 25, Augusta Military Academy, there.

Track.

April 27, Woodberry Forest, Virginia Episcopal and S. M. S., triangular meet, at Lynchburg.

May 4, State prep meet, at Charlottesville; 11, Massanutten Military Academy, here; 15, Augusta Military Academy, here; 18, Blco "C" invitation meet, Washington; 25, Fishburne Military School, there.

Tennis.

April 27, Woodberry Forest School, here. May 3, University of Virginia Freshmen, there; 7, Fork Union Military Academy, here; 10 and 11, State secondary school meet, Charlottesville; 18, Fishburne Military School, here; 25, Massanutten Military Academy, here.

Club at Cumberland Opens for Year May 4

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., April 7.—The formal opening of the Cumberland Country Club for the 1935 season has been set for Saturday, May 4, on which date members of the club will engage in golf and tennis matches, followed by a dance.

Edward J. Morgan, jr., of North Quincy, Mass., is the new golf professional, succeeding Joseph Fungy, of Clarksburg, W. Va.

Ivan Poling, manager of the Fort Cumberland Hotel, retained as captain of the men's golf team of the club, is making arrangements for the annual series of matches with the Fountain Head Country Club of Hagerstown.

Post Mortems . . .

The Rev. Harold Cutbill, who recently created a sensation by announcing that a fan dancer would perform before his congregation, holds the world's record for running 1,000 yards . . . Bernie Jones, captain of the Sholl's unlimited championship basket ball team, has taken a job with the Bureau of Investigation and will play with that team next year . . . Frank Pytlak, Cleveland catcher, became a newspaper man during his team's spring training period . . . he acted as correspondent for a Buffalo Polish paper . . . Kid Azteca, the Mexican welterweight champion, who has been suggested as an opponent for Jimmy McLarnin in the big bout that will be staged for the Shriners here June 10, never has been defeated . . . and he never has fought outside of Mexico . . . he has a fairly easy time winning from opponents in his own country as he is used to the high altitude, and outsiders, unused to the rarified atmosphere, lose their wind after four or five rounds . . . Maj. Lucian Vandoren, chairman of the Boxing Commission, who is in Garfield Hospital suffering from pneumonia, is recovering rapidly . . . and expects to leave the hospital this week . . . he will take a long trip to Bermuda to recuperate . . . and, Just 25 Years Ago: Business High School defeated Georgetown Prep, 12 to 8.

School Teams Are Facing Busy Week

Western Plays Alexandria in Today's Feature; Others Booked.

THE five school teams already well into their baseball seasons, Western High, Central High, St. Alban's, Georgetown Prep and Devitt Prep, continue in full swing today in the opening chapter of a busy scholastic sports week which will see Eastern and Tech opening their diamond campaigns and Eastern baptizing the schoolboy track season.

In the feature game of this afternoon, Western rushes in where Central tread in defeat against Alexandria High Thursday. Central travels to Baltimore for a game with Mount St. Josephs; St. Albans anticipates the arrival of Shenandoah Academy and Georgetown Prep is girding its loins for Devitt Prep, all of which events are scheduled this afternoon.

Eastern opens its season against Mount St. Josephs at Baltimore tomorrow, meets Alexandria Thursday and Washington-Lee, Friday.

One prep school league tennis match is listed for the week, with Gonzaga playing St. Albans at St. Albans tomorrow and one prep school golf match, with Georgetown Prep meeting St. Johns at Garrett Park, Thursday.

G. U. Prep in Two Games.

Georgetown Prep, plunging deeper into its baseball schedule, has carded Charlotte Hall for Wednesday and Gilman High for Friday.

Tech begins its season Saturday against Episcopal, while Western travels south to Randolph-Macon Academy on the same day after meeting Episcopal Wednesday in the second of its three games of the week.

Coach Artie Boyd's track team inaugurates the cinder season Friday against the perennially powerful Episcopal High runners, weight throwers and jumpers.

Two interhigh golf matches add further rivalry to the bill, Central playing the defending champions from Western Saturday and Tech meeting Roosevelt the same day.

Baer Bout Backer Defies Commission

Signing of Ramey-Bernard Arouses Protest.

By the Associated Press.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 7.—William T. Morrissey announced today his fight show, featuring Max Baer in an exhibition bout—and Wesley Ramey, lightweight title contender, would go on Wednesday night in defiance of State Boxing Commissioner E. W. Dickerson.

Dickerson had refused official sanction of the card on which Baer is matched against Ed Wills, Chicago Negro, in a four-sound nontitle bout; Ramey matched in a 10-rounder with Roger Bernard, of Flint, and Baer's brother, Buddy, slated to go four rounds with Harry Nelson, of Chicago.

Informed of Morrissey's announcement, Dickerson reaffirmed his refusal of sanction, declaring he did not believe it "proper" to match a fighter of Ramey's caliber with Bernard.

Bowie 'Turns Corner' as Mutuel Play Shows Big Increase

Daily Double Is Credited By Many

Coucci Tops Riders With Nine; Beery Handicap Feature Today.

By Walter Haight.

SOME blame it on the daily double, others on the return of prosperity and still others on the fact that racing is becoming more popular everywhere, but, whatever the cause, the first week of racing in Maryland indicates that the turf situation in the nearby State has definitely "turned the corner." Although Bowie offered a caliber of horses slightly below its usual standard, attendance has been high, mutuel play has shown a decided increase over last year and track officials at the four major courses, as well as those in charge of the half-milers, are preparing to change from red to black ink.

The "West Point of the Air" Handicap, named in honor of Wallace Beery, the star of the picture current at the Fox Theater, is the feature race today. It has drawn a field of seven of the best sprinters on the grounds and should develop into a keen interest. Star Porter is the overnight favorite, but he will have Evergold, Stand Pat, Identify and others ready to score if he falters.

$2,000 Test Saturday.

The high spot of the week from a competitive angle, is the running of The Bowie Kindergarten on Saturday. The $2,000 added test is over the usual 4-furlong juvenile course and every 2-year-old of promise hereabouts has been nominated.

Track officials and turf-writers are unable to explain the mania for the daily double that has developed in this section. Some contend that betters of the Washington area have heard so much about the combination bet that they believe there is magic in it. The high mutuels paid for the first four days probably have been the lure. From a figure of $11,500 on opening day, the "double pool" has climbed steadily. On Wednesday $14,084 was played; Thursday, $15,052; Friday, $19,320, and Saturday a world record was set, mutuel men believe, when $30,394 went into the machines.

3,000 Turned Away.

Had Bowie been prepared for the rush on the "double" with additional ticket sellers, Saturday's total might have reached $40,000. Some 3,000 persons, with bills in their hands, turned away grumbling when the windows were closed.

Havre de Grace officials, who were inclined to disregard the "double" as inducive to increased crowds, have definitely decided to have the combination bet. Mutuel Manager Mort Mahoney said Saturday he expected the double wager to reach $50,000 at Pimlico and predicted that 50 windows would be necessary to handle the play. Preakness Day may bring even a higher figure, he said.

15 Favorites Win.

Although Bowie hasn't had a fast track to date, the racing has been generally true to form. A few upsets have occurred, but in the majority of races, the favorites and second choices have been close. During the five days, 15 of the 35 favories won for a percentage of .428. Racing Secretary John B. Campbell is being congratulated upon his weight assignments, which have brought more than the average of close finishes.

Silvio Coucci is leading the jockey colony by a wide margin. The little Brooklyn Express has ridden 9 winners, 6 seconds and 3 thirds in 28 mounts and packs a percentage of .321. Bobby Merritt has 4 winners and Bobby Jones, H. Lindberg, Skinny Fallon and Earl Porter have 3 each.

Roman Soldier's Odds Cut to 15-1 for Derby

St. Louis, April 7 (AP).—Tom Kearney, betting commissioner, after Roman Soldier's victory at Arlington Downs yesterday, slashed the odds on the colt for the Kentucky Derby from 20 to 15 to 1.

Other prices quoted by Kearney for the Derby:

J. E. Widener's Chance Sun, 4 to 1; Mrs. W. M. Jefford's Commonwealth, 6 to 1.

Bowie Race Track, April 8.

Dear Al:

Hold your hats, fellows. I'm liable to blow them off. Six straight winners Saturday. And might have had seven if Bobby Jones hadn't rushed the legs off Atmosphere. Looks as though the firm struck oil. Prices were nothing to write home about, but there was plenty of dough there for you boys and girls, providing you used good judgment. Clocker Mike spent Sunday debating whether or not to commit suicide. He began a $2 parlay on Fervid and sent it through to the last race. He had four grand and something on Atmosphere and when Master Lad came along in the stretch, I thought he would eat the pressbox. At the quarter pole, Atmosphere was winging in front and Mike had visions of a trip to the South Sea Isles. At the half, the horse was still there and Mike was dreaming of Paris. At the three-quarters it was still Atmosphere by a length and a half and Mike was renting a pent house. In the stretch, Atmosphere was driving to the wire in front and Mike had a head for blondes and brunettes. At the finish it was Master Lad. Mike went wild. As the sun was sinking behind the pine trees, we walked across the infield together. I felt sorry for Mike. I wanted him to start the conversation. He did by saying, "How about a half a check, boss? I'm getting hungry."

BILL.

First race—Distract could not cope with the speed of Cherry Stone in his first outing here. At that, Horn was away none too well with the colt, and more alert handling may bring a set of brackets and the first half of the daily double. Galla ran third to the top one here and will be in the thick of it today. Clarksdale is a sleeper here and Porter may surprise.

Second race—How's Chances is the natural choice here after that fine race last week. Set a swift pace for Lynx Eye and that crowd and held on well for the place. I would not be surprised if Mrs. Whitney's entry ran one, two. Enthusiasm is the other half, and has speed. Chief Mourner picks up weight here.

Third race—Black Harmony has been away from the races for some time. Won rather impressively early in the Hialeah meeting. Workouts indicate that this one has been benefitted by the rest. A hustling ride today might upset the apple cart. Judge Schilling is as dangerous as ever. Impromptu was well meant when he refused to break here the other day. Deserves attention.

Fourth race—Prince Pompey had a conditioner here the other day, and he should be bearing down in this race. The slower the track gets, the better he will like it. Stone Martin was sharpened here Saturday, and will be close if sent back. Clocker Mike likes Beyond Doubt, but this one showed little in the West.

Fifth race—With Identify it is a question of condition. I'm reliably informed that this one is at tops. If so, Evergold and Star Porter will have to do a lot of running to crowd the Vanderbilt horse out of top money. Evergold's last must be thrown out. The veteran was not prepared when the break came.

Sixth race—Bye Bye Mary won for us last out. She was virtually left at the post and came on to score in a sprint. Asked to go the distance today, I'm stringing along. Coucci came in for criticism last week when Foreign Lady was off poorly. However, she is a slow starter. Bird Lore was a trifle short last out and figures to be close here.

Seventh race—Idle Flirt has been consistently close during the winter racing and did well last out. If Lindberg replaces C. W. Smith as the rider I believe this one will win for Owner Abel. Polo Bar was well played last out, and should take the place. The Bedwell forces have Fair Billy in this. He won six races last year, and might have been kidding out on the Coast.

Celtics Allow Foe 2 Hits; Win, 11-0

Titcomb and Garvey Star on Slab. Shutting Out Fort Humphreys.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., April 7.—The St. Mary's Celtics opened their season in impressive style this afternoon at Baggett's Stadium as they shut out Fort Humphreys, 11-0, in a game called in the seventh inning because of cold. Jimmy Titcomb and Joe Garvey shared the mound assignment for the winners, and they limited the Soldiers to two singles, one each. Titcomb was credited with 11 strike-outs in the five innings he worked.

The Celtics were off to an early lead, scoring four runs in the first inning. Two more were added in the second, four in the fourth, and the final in the sixth. Kafka, starting pitcher for Fort Humphreys, was sent from the mound in the fourth after having granted ten bingles. Tolley, who relieved him, worked for the remaining three innings and held the Celtics to one hit and one run.

Joe Hamilton and Pepco Barry, outfielders, led the Celtics at the bat with four and three hits, respectively.

Alexandria High School entertains Western High School at Baggett's Stadium tomorrow afternoon. It is expected that Ed Hammersly, ace right-hander of last year's team, will start for the Twins.

Episcopal High School opens its baseball season tomorrow afternoon at Hoxton Field, opposing Culpeper High. The game was scheduled for yesterday, but was postponed because of the threatening weather.

Candidates for the American Legion Junior teams are requested to report at Hayden's Field for the initial drill at 4 p. m. tomorrow.

The Mount Vernon Independents-Dor-A A. C. game, scheduled for today, was postponed because of wet grounds.

Lee-Jackson High School will play only a few games outside of the regular Fairfax County League contests, Coach Reveley has indicated. The county schedule was not released in time to allow Reveley to arrange an extensive schedule. Aside from county teams, the Little Generals probably will clash with teams from Manassas, Occoquon and Alexandria.

he was playing. He still had 230 yards to go to get home for a possible three.

Sarazen, cool and cocky, squinted at the green, looked at his ball and at the green again. His ball was on a wet skiddy place, a close lie and a hanging one. I said to Jones, "This is the shot that counts." Sarazen at that moment was about 1 to 500. He swung. There was a sharp smack. The little white ball hissed as it passed us. And no more than eight seconds later this same Sarazen was even money, because he holed the shot.

The ball flew straight on a line to the green, hit once in the rye grass on the near edge, bounced once, began to roll toward the hole. It went on and on and my eyes popped out of head at the thought that the man was actually going to stop close enough to get his 3, then it vanished. It was IN.

Had you been over the hill the crowd would have told you what happened. When Sarazen hit the ball there was an "Ah," as it screamed off his club, a spoon, then as it streaked for the pin there was a running and rising "Oh." The ball hit and bounced and there was a general shout all along the fairway for his hitting the target.

Then the ball headed for the hole, accompanied by a rising crescendo scream from some 1,500 throats, because, standing on the hill, we could all watch its course, and the screaming suddenly reached its peak in one great, hysterical yell as the ball vanished from all sight, and 230 yards down the green, men were waving their hats and women their handkerchiefs, and the yelling never did die down at all.

Purchasing Job Pledged Mertz On His Birthday

Gov. Nice States Arundel Man to Take Place of Walter Kirkman.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., April 7.—Gov. Harry W. Nice disclosed today that he will name Harry Mertz, of Riverdale, Anne Arundel County, to succeed Walter N. Kirkman, State purchasing agent, when the latter's term expires May 1.

The Governor made the announcement at a birthday party held for Mertz by the County Central Republican Club, of which Mertz is a leading figure.

In his announcement the Governor emphasized that the Anne Arundel Republican leader would take over only one of the positions Kirkman now holds—that of State purchasing agent and secretary-treasurer of the central purchasing bureau.

Kirkman also is chief of the bureau of personnel and accounts of the State department of health, in which capacity, Gov. Nice said, his services are invaluable."

Kirkman's salary as purchasing agent is listed at $4,500; the health department post pays $4,800 annually. He also is director of the State budget.

He was appointed to the position of State purchasing agent by former Gov. Albert C. Ritchie in 1921.

Schools Favored In Works Program

West Virginia Governor Allots Them $21,000,000.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charleston, W. Va., April 17.—In his outline of a public works' program in West Virginia, calling for an expenditure of $111,810,000 from the Federal relief fund of $4,880,000,000, Gov. H. G. Kump says the largest item will be $21,000,000 for schools, with a close second of $20,000,000 for construction of secondary highways.

Other projects in the outline are: Conservation commission work in State forests and parks, $3,000,000; elimination of railroad grade crossings, $4,000,000; construction of new bridges, $4,100,000; new buildings and other projects now under way or contemplated, $2,000,000; sanitation and health, $2,000,000, together with smaller items to make up the entire allotment, including $31,000,000 for flood control, soil erosion work, improvement of National Guard camps and new county and municipal projects.

Power Rate Cuts Benefit 2 Pennsylvania Towns

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., April 7.—Light rates will be reduced in two more Franklin County communities, following submission and approval of changes, the State Public Service Commission announced yesterday.

A saving of $1,703 is expected for 1,302 customers of the Mercersburg, Lemaster & Markes Electric Co., according to schedules filed by that company, while at Greencastle, the Light, Heat, Fuel & Power Co. announced reductions to its 900 customers who will save $1,116.

Application Invited For Loan on Crops

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Tappahannock, Va., April 7.—Francis D. Moore, field supervisor, will be in the courthouse at Tappahannock Tuesday until 4 p. m. to assist farmers in making applications for emergency crop loans.

All applications made in 1935, it was stated, must be submitted to and approved by the local production credit association with headquarters at Warsaw, before they can be accepted by the local approval committee and the emergency loan office of Baltimore.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky

Movie Boners

Hollywood, April 5.

AS YET there aren't any nominations for the "No Flicker Flaw" prize. No one seems to be able to discover a picture without a movie boner; in fact this club is meeting again with the listings of the new members.

"Naughty Marietta" is a fine flicker and W. S. Van Dyke is one of Hollywood's best directors, but according to Henri Fluchere, Director Van Dyke let one slip. La McDonald is on board the ship taking her to New Orleans and she is seen composing a lyric with a fountain pen—and in the eighteenth century. Even her rank of princess, says Fluchere, does not rate her such a privilege as that in an age of quills and inkpots. In the latest edition of "Golddiggers" and in particular "The Lullaby of Broadway" number, Gertrude Tampkin writes that Dorothy Dare is seen coming up the stairs at about 7 in the morning. She lights a cigarette as she is about to enter her room, then she bends down to give the cat some milk and the cigarette has disappeared. Did she inhale the cigarette as well as the smoke?

Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray are leaving for London in "The Gilded Lily." The boat sets out, writes Samuel Babin, and we see a beautiful liner with two smokestacks.

The same boat carrying the same Miss Colbert and the same MacMurray docks at Southhampton and we see a ship with three smokestacks. Is it possible, asks Mr. Babin, that on the way over the captain discovered that two smokestacks weren't enough and had an extra one built? Often, in the movies, people start for Europe on one boat and arrive there on another. They seem to like swapping boats while crossing a stream.

• • • •

WHEN Shirley Temple and Evelyn Venable are in the Western town in which Shirley is made a little colonel in the flicker of that title, it is evident that their colored servant, Becky, is with them, writes M. S. Scribner. Later, when "The Little Colonel" returns to Kentucky and is seen throwing mud at Col. Lionel Barrymore, he turns to Becky and demands to know whose child Shirley is. Doesn't it seem plausible that Col. Barrymore would be as surprised to see Becky after several years as he is to see a strange child? Apparently not.

Walter Connelly in "Father Brown, Detective" is shown with a glass of milk in his hand, which his housekeeper is insisting he drink, says Maise Roden. He takes several man-sized swallows in the closeup and yet when the long shot is flashed on the screen, the glass is still filled.

• • • •

In "The Good Fairy," claims S. Leibowitzy, Herbert Marshall has a scene in which he makes a speech saying he never had a car and admits to knowing nothing about a car by saying he will get a one-cylinder machine. Yet, the same day he is seen driving an auto through the streets with Margaret Sullavan. Mr. Leibowitz would like to get a car, a license and learn to drive in that rapid time.

And Edward G. Robinson as Mannion in "The Whole Town's Talking" asks Edward G. Robinson as Jones to take some money to the Farmers Trust Bank, according to Irving Sosnow. When the bank appears on the screen it is called "The First National Bank," This is another way of finding fault with the capitalistic system—or it may be that Mr. Sosnow is in error and juggled the bank monickers himself.

• • • •

A GROUP of people are marooned in the desterted town of Helldorado and, since the bridges and all means of approach have been washed away by a rainstorm, the only exit is through an old mine shaft. Yet, the next day, when the rumor of a gold strike starts, people are seen jumping into their autos and racing to Helldorado. Almost as fast as one can say any word—you name your favorite—half the population of California has arrived in this deserted town. And, writes Deborah Gladstein, I'm still trying to figure out how this was accomplished, since there was no means of approach.

George Brent and Kay Francis are sitting in a park while it is snowing in the flicker, "Living on Velvet."

Everything about them, says Nellie Tinkou, is covered with snow, but not one flake falls on either Miss Francis or Brent. It just goes to show you another wonder of the movies.

• • • •

Here is a movie boner which you can watch for when you see George White's new edition of his flicker, "Scandals." It was noticed at the preview by Douglas Churchill. Alice Faye has left the "Scandals" and when she can't be found for the evening performance, her name is removed from the marquee. White insists that the show will continue without Alice Faye and the next flash is that of the "Scandals" in action; and there on the stage, a member of the chorus strutting their stuff, is Alice Faye, the star of the show who couldn't be found.
